Liberty League Laying Foundation For Big Test Vote on the New Deal

Campaign Will Spread Over Continent and About 4 Million Property Owners Will Participate in Non-Partisan Judgment.

PERSONAL RIGHTS

Avowed Purpose is That of Forum to Protect Citizens Before Congress.

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—The American Liberty League began laying foundations today for a campaign across the continent to recruit 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 property owners to judge the New Deal.

Avowedly non-partisan and "not anti-Roosevelt," it set out to command all possible influence in the warming debate over whether the administration is "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

At the head stand leaders in both major parties popularly identified as "conservatives"; Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, Democrats, who lost the Presidency to Hoover and Coolidge; James W. Wadsworth and Nathan L. Miller, Republican strongmen in New York.

To Combat Radicalism

Already there are rumblings of "liberal" arraignment of the move that Jouett Shouse announced last night as one to combat "radicalism." It was he who described the league as "not anti-Roosevelt," but rather intended to serve as a forum and a force before Congress for those who want to guard their personal and property rights.

A week ago he told President Roosevelt about it, in words like these: "The League will become a real factor in assisting toward recovery and the restoration of prosperous conditions for all our people."

President Aware

That the President hardly would take exception to the announced goal is accepted. It also is certain he is aware of the political potentialities.

The League's purposes are twofold under the heading: "To defend and protect the constitution of the United States." Data will be disseminated to teach:

Two-fold Aims

1—"The necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government"; and

2—"The duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save, and acquire prosperity, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

It is too early to estimate the possible effect of this bi-partisan union upon the oft-discussed realignment of parties into conservative and liberal ranks. The traditional party roots strike too deep to be torn up in a day, if ever they will be.

A La Bull Moose.

But there were some who saw a possibility that, if the league and Mr. Roosevelt differ on crucial questions in an irreconcilable way, a great slashing of party lines may recall the days of the Bull Moose. That is why last night's announcement may prove historic.

As to what stand the league will take on NRA, AAA, financial policies or relief programs, nothing was said. In organized labor quarters, however, there was expectation that the league will call one or more of these into question. The tax bill to start paying costs of the new deal promises to provide a bitter contest in the January session of congress.

Shouse, who is to head the league, is no stranger to the public. He has served in the Kansas legislature, in the national house, as assistant secretary of the treasury, as executive chairman of the Democratic national committee, and as president of the association against the prohibition amendment, disbanded since repeal.

Our Growing Population

The following births have been reported to the board of health:

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Ricketson of 4 Murphy street, a daughter, Marie Catherine, at Benedictine Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Cashin of 673 Broadway, a son, William Daniel, at Benedictine Hospital.

Paint Stop Signs On Pavement

A further protection has been added to Kingston's "full stop" streets but many motorists still fail to heed the signs and dash through "stop" intersections endangering those who are foolhardy enough to believe in the "stop" signs. White reflecting lines have been painted on the pavement at these stop street intersections and the word "stop" has also been painted on the pavement. This warning is in addition to the "cat's-eye" stop signs which are placed at the curb line. Many out of town motorists who were unfamiliar with the existence of the full stop signs had failed to observe them in the past but there is no excuse now for failure to observe the law. Unfortunately the driver who is the most frequent offender is the local motorist who knows of the stop street ordinance but fails to obey.

Salves and Challenges Over U. S. Sooth and Irritate Labor Scene

Statement Based on Government Survey, Says Sloan, Proves That Cotton Industry Has Gone Long Way to Help Workers—Automobile Code, Aluminum Strikes and Railway Elections Are Outstanding Issues Today Before Labor "Healers."

Uncle Sam generously spread his recovery salves over the nation's strike-pocked labor situation today and prepared further applications. Reactions varied.

Soon after the administration ordered hours reduced in the cotton garment industry yesterday, the NRA labor board both agreed to insist on reopening the automobile manufacturers' code. The American Federation of Labor seeks wage and hour revisions in the motor car factories.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, said at New York that "impartial government economists" have determined the impending nation-wide strike of cotton textile workers to be unjustified. He asserted no field had increased its workers' benefits as much under the NRA as had the cotton textile industry.

Uncle Sam's Bureau of Labor Statistics is making a detailed study of the effect of NRA codes on employment, wages and hours in various industries, including the textile, for future guidance.

Robert Bruere, chairman of the cotton textile industrial relations board, has completed a statement which is believed to offer an alternative to the textile strike. He is seeking the approval of other government officials before making it public.

Labor called the Aluminum Company of America's rejection of the labor department's peace proposals "a challenge of the authority vested in the federal government by congress." In its statement the National Council of Aluminum Workers denied that the plan to end their strike involves a closed shop, as the company said.

Own Strike Problem

Uncle Sam had his own strike problem in Milwaukee, where the FERA authorities ordered resumption of all projects today despite the injury of four men in a sharp clash last night between 1,000 strike pickets and 75 FERA workers.

Things "look very much better" to the mediators seeking a solution of the Chicago union bus drivers' strike and Minneapolis is enjoying normalcy after the end of the truck drivers' strike.

H. H. Reed, representative of the national mediation board, was served at Richmond, Va., in injunction proceedings intended to block an election among Chesapeake and Ohio Railway clerks. The poll was to start today at Newport News.

Union workers in the Chevrolet and Fisher body plants in St. Louis decided to appeal to President Roosevelt and Secretary Perkins after the national automobile labor board postponed a hearing on 26 cases of alleged discrimination against union workers who were not rehired by the two companies.

Two hundred dye workers in North Bergen, N. J., voted to strike to force recognition of their union.

Approximately 400 workers in five bathrobe factories in Red Bank, N. J., reported for work as usual today, refusing to heed a strike call sent out by the Bathrobe Workers Union. A plant official termed the union "a racket composed of Communists."

Hunt For Mobsters And $427,000 Loot Is Made Wider Today

Check-up Is Requested by New York Police of Actions of Gangsters in Distant Cities—Rumors and Reports on Boats and Tough Characters Pour in.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 23 (AP)—The hunt for the mobsters who executed the $427,000 looting of an armored truck spread in widening circles today.

Although they still clung to the theory that the holdup of the truck in Brooklyn Tuesday had been perpetuated by a local gang, police requested authorities in distant cities to check up on the recent movements of known gangsters.

They want to know what they were doing at the time of the holdup, one of the most brazen and profitable in American crime annals.

Fingerprints found at the scene of the robbery do not tally with any of those on local police records, authorities have found.

A mystery boat perplexed investigators again today. This time, it was a lobster dory, found scuttled in Jamaica Bay, in a cove which in prohibition days was a favorite rendezvous for rum-runners.

The boat was examined at low tide last night, about 50 feet off shore. Holes had been battered in its bottom; obviously it had been purposely sunk.

Determined to learn if the dory was one of the boats used by some of the bandits in making their getaway by water, Brooklyn police ordered the boat raised and towed to dock for a better examination.

Some of the mobsters embarked on two speedy motor boats at the foot of Bay 35th street shortly after the holdup, and since police have been investigating all suspicious craft.

They have found nothing of value. They believe that the fugitives transferred their loot from one boat to another, like a baton in a relay race.

Despite their successive frustrations, police expressed optimism.

"We are confident that we're going to break it soon," said Inspector John J. Ryan, in whose district the crime occurred.

He declined to disclose the basis for his hopes.

SOUTHERN PARSON FACES KIDNAP HOAX ARRAIGNMENT

Goldsboro, N. C., Aug. 23 (AP)—Hollow-eyed and dejected, R. H. Askew, 28-year-old self ordained disciple of Aimee Semple McPherson, faced today a charge of sending ransom notes through the mails, after confessing, officers said, that his "kidnaping" was a hoax.

Sheriff Paul Garrison said Askew had admitted his abduction story was mere fiction and that he had sent notes to his 50-year-old wife and to Aimee Semple McPherson demanding $25,000 from each.

"I needed a rest and had to get away," Sheriff Garrison quoted Askew as saying. The charge was preferred by department of justice agents who investigated Askew's sroty after he had walked into Nashville police headquarters and said he had been abducted by three men. Unable to furnish $5,000 bond, Askew was taken to the county jail to await a hearing August 31.

UTAH POLICE IN SEARCH FOR WOULD-BE KIDNAPERS.

Ogden, Utah, August 23 (AP)—An apparent attempt to kidnap four young girls, all members of prominent Utah families, sent police in search of three men today.

Accosting the girls in a wooded ravine where they were on a picnic, the three men bound and gagged their victims, but were frightened away when the sound of approaching horses was heard.

The girls, who freed themselves from the bonds after the men fled, were: Jean Scrowcroft, 12, and Margo Spargo, 13, both of Ogden, and Eldeen Mulcahy, 13, and Joan Lehman, both of Salt Lake City.

NEW YORK POLICE BOAT SEARCHED FOR CLUES HERE

One of the speedboats of the New York police department was in the Rondout creek on Wednesday afternoon and looked over the various pleasure craft berthed near Eddyville in search of the speedboats in which the armored car bandits of Brooklyn made their escape. The boats sought were not found here.

Edw. J. Ahearn, Bitter Enemy of Curry Faction, Died in New York Today

PERITONITIS

Ahearn Added Final Blow to Curry Regime Which Was Weakened By Seabury Probe

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Edward J. Ahearn, Tammany district leader and one of the most influential figures in the city's Democratic organization, died today, a little more than a month after the victorious culmination of his long fight to oust the John F. Curry faction from control of "The Hall."

For the past five weeks Ahearn had been waging a losing battle against peritonitis in Post Graduate Hospital. The end came after he had apparently reached the convalescence stage in his illness. A week ago it was announced he would be able to leave the hospital within ten days. He was forty-three years old.

Waged Long Struggle

Ahearn's long struggle against Curry, which resulted in the latter being forced to resign the leadership of the Tammany organization last July, began when Judge George W. Olvany suddenly resigned the leadership early in 1929.

Ahearn, one of the youngest of the Tammany leaders, was put forward as a candidate to succeed him. He had the backing of former Governor Alfred E. Smith and Surrogate James A. Foley, and for a time it appeared that he would be elected.

Checked by Walker

At the last moment, however, James J. Walker, then mayor, lined up behind Curry, and exerted sufficient pressure upon district leaders who were his political appointees to defeat Ahearn. The vote was close, Curry getting 12 1-6 votes to 10 1-3 for his opponent.

Ahearn never became reconciled to the Curry regime, and last spring, with the latter's power weakened by the Seabury investigation disclosures and the crushing defeat suffered by the Tiger machine at the last city election, he opened a drive to remove Curry from the leadership.

Curry Goes Out

Curry was ousted after an obstinate fight, and last month when the district leaders met to elect a new chief, Ahearn's name was again mentioned for the place. But in the interests of harmony and to insure the victory of a man acceptable to the Roosevelt administration, stepped aside and threw his support to James J. Dooling, the present leader.

Succeeded Father

Ahearn succeeded his father as leader of the fourth district when he was only thirty years old. So efficient was his leadership that the section on the east side over which he ruled became known as the "model" Tammany district. His hold on the people was so complete that at the 1932 election Governor Lehman received more than 15,000 votes in the fourth district and his Republican opponent received less than a thousand.

The Ahearn organization stood ready and able to come to the aid of the least important voter at any time. All that was asked in return was: "Vote every star."

Ahearn is survived by his mother, Mrs. John F. Ahearn, a brother, William J. Ahearn, and three sisters, Mrs. Anna Murray, Mrs. Patrick Keating, and Betty Ahearn. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Boulevard Nearly Done As Concrete Strips Are Completed Wednesday

Harp and Conway Finish All But Few Feet of Concrete Laying Wednesday Evening; Will Take Week to Season

TRAFFIC ALLOWED

Two-Way Traffic Is Maintained on Newly Paved Road to Rosendale and New Paltz

The laying of concrete on the Boulevard had been practically completed by Harp & Conway when work ceased Wednesday evening. There remained but a few feet of the last lane to be completed near the Tuberculosis Hospital entrance where the roadway widens out at the turn. The entire road will be open from the Wall street junction to the city line in about a week and at present there is two way traffic maintained over the entire route with the exception of a stretch from near the cut on the Bowers property to the Wallkill Valley Railroad crossing and over this stretch traffic is maintained by a flag system with little delay.

From the city line at the railroad crossing to the top of the hill at the Tuberculosis Hospital the roadway is two strips wide. From that point to the Wall street junction the pavement is three strips wide. Two strips were finished over the entire route last Tuesday and then work of laying the last strip was started at the Wall street end and carried toward the Tuberculosis Hospital entrance. Last evening that strip had been practically completed when a Freeman reporter made an inspection.

Work Rushed

Work is being rushed on the placing of the curb on the west side of the street where retaining walls have already been erected along properties which were damaged by the widening of the street. This work is about completed on the west side. Work on the east side will be completed with no delay to traffic.

The one way distance from the Bowers property to the city line will be gradually reduced as the concrete becomes seasoned and additional strips are opened.

With the completion of the Boulevard, a job which has been beset with numerous difficulties, there will be a concrete route from Kingston directly to New Paltz. The route from Kingston to Rosendale and through to New Paltz has been altered in many places where curves and grades have been elliminated and in many places the road passes through strange scenes. At Rosendale a new bridge spans the creek, eliminating the necessity of passing through the business portion of the village and over Station Hill to Tillson. At Tillson the village is practically by-passed and there is a new bridge over the Wallkill west of the old Perrine's covered bridge. The distance and time of New Paltz has been very materially cut by the new alignment of the road.

Completion of the Ireland Corners-New Paltz road which is now under construction will give a direct concrete route through to Wallkill and Orange county by way of Walden.

Alabama Youth Held For Murder of Co-Ed

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 23. (AP)—Harold Taylor, who took 19-year-old Faye New on an automobile ride from which she never returned, is held today for her murder.

Taylor was one of two men subjected to steady questioning after the Howard College co-ed's body was found in a ditch yesterday. The other man was A. B. Cain, Faye's suitor, who had said he followed her to the city limits as her ride with Taylor started Monday night.

As Taylor was led away to jail, Cain was released. Police are convinced his story was true.

Miss New's body was found face up in a ditch into which Coroner Evans said she had been thrown after fighting for her life.

Two deep gashes in her throat, both mortal wounds, ended a struggle during which she was choked, scratched and beaten, an autopsy report said. The spot where she was found was more than a mile from where Taylor said she left his automobile after an argument.

Taylor, viewing the body, denied any part in the girl's death. "She was unhurt when she ran into the woods from my car," he said.

WORK RELIEF LAYS IT DOWN AND WATER BOARD DIGS IT UP

The local TERA completing the laying of a new sewer system in Foxhall avenue has recently completed building a new pavement by laying Kyrock on the street. After the work relief had laid down the new pavement the water board on Wednesday started to dig it up, until work was halted by order of Mayor C. J. Heiselman whose attention was called to the fact that the new pavement was being dug up.

It developed that when the new sewer was laid in Foxhall avenue the water board also laid a new water main in the street, and evidently through lack of cooperation between the water department and the work relief the gate boxes connecting with the new water main were covered over with a layer of Kyrock pavement. The gate boxes, which are used to shut off the flow of water in the main, were not raised high enough above the surface by the water department and so are now hidden from sight under the new pavement.

Just what action will be taken will probably be decided at a meeting of the board of water commissioners.

Ancient Reptile Skull 140,000,000 Year Old Is Found in Wyoming

Barosaurus a Dinosaur, Was Semi-Aquatic Reptile With Stovepipe-Like Sections of Neck and Back—First Specimen Ever Found.

New York, August 23 (AP).—From the Dinosaur "Valley of Death" in Wyoming has been taken the skull of a rare reptile that waddled through the swamps 140,000,000 years ago. Announcement of the find came today by F. Trubee Davison, president of the American Museum of Natural History.

The skull is that of barosaurus, a huge and little-known dinosaur of which there is no complete fossil in existence.

With this discovery, reported to the Museum by Dr. Barum Brown, leader of an expedition which is penetrating the sensational dinosaur graveyard in the Big Horn Mountain region of Wyoming, science establishes the corpus delecti of barosaurus.

It is the first barosaurus skull ever found.

Barosaurus was a semi-aquatic reptile, Museum officials said. Its chief peculiarity was the extreme elongation of the neck vertebrae. They look like section of a stovepipe.

The skull Dr. Brown's operatives excavated was comparatively small. It had an insignificent brain case. Like all dinosaurs, barosaurus was not very bright.

Davison, just returned from the scene of the digging, expressed amazement—"A layman's amazement", he emphasized—at Dr. Brown's theory of how the barosaurus died, together with the dozen or so other giant reptiles whose remains have been found in the bone deposit.

"They perished over a comparatively short period of time," he said, "in a summer perhaps."

Continuing with the reconstruction of the tragedy, Davison said that there might have been a great drouth, like the one this summer, which dried the pools and marshes covering Wyoming.

"The dinosaurs sought refuge in a fast-dwindling pool," Davison went on. "They became bogged, sank deeper and deeper and died slowly. Some of them, however, met violent deaths. Carnivorus dinosaurs attacked the helpless creatures, cheating the death trap. Dr. Brown has found the fossil of a flesh-eating reptile in the deposit."

BAN AGAINST SWEETHEARTS STARTS MASS HYSTERIA MOVE

Budapest, Aug. 23 (AP)—Because they were not permitted to see their sweethearts among the troops of the Hungarian army, school girls of the reformatory at Rakospalota developed what doctors diagnosed today as mass hysteria.

The girls, ranging in age from 12 to 18 years, began swallowing all sorts of objects from teaspoons to tooth brushes. They had to be given hospital treatment immediately and some were reported dying from the effects of operations to remove the objects.

The girls had been forbidden by the Catholic nuns in charge of the school to write their boy friends, so they started smuggling out their love letters in loaves of bread and in cakes. This subterfuge was exposed and punishment was swift.

Then the epidemic of mass hysteria broke out in the school, culminating in the craze of swallowing foreign objects.

Richberg, Gen. Johnson Reported in Sharp Clash On NRA Reorganization

President's Plans to Go to Hyde Park are Arrested by Report, But Richberg is Silent.

DROUTH PROBLEM

Washington Post States That Secretary Perkins and Others Will Ask F. D. R. for Showdown.

Enroute with President Roosevelt to Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt hurried back to the White House today as fresh reports sprang up of a sharp controversy over the reorganization of NRA.

The chief executive, who paid his last respects to the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey yesterday, changed his original plans to go directly to his summer home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and returned to Washington instead in order to attend to some urgent matters. The recovery program was one of the items slated for Presidential attention.

In Washington, Donald R. Richberg, Mr. Roosevelt's chief industrial advisor, declined to discuss reports that he and Hugh S. Johnson, Blue Eagle chief, were in a bitter dispute over a new NRA structure. On his return to the White House, the President is expected to take command of the situation and outline definitely principles for recovery reorganization.

The drouth was another matter with which the President had to wrestle. With another view of the drouth's devastating effects in the otherwise rich midwest, Mr. Roosevelt called Secretary Wallace aboard to fortify administration efforts to meet the calamity.

Again, as on his cross country tour, Mr. Roosevelt was met by crowds yesterday and last night. So tremendous was the throng at Carrollton that he was delayed several minutes in reaching his train.

Today, as yesterday, he remained in his car.

Comment in Capital.

Washington, August 23 (AP).—As President Roosevelt headed back toward the capital today, published reports said the high command of his industrial recovery campaign had split in a sharp dispute over reorganization of the NRA.

Donald R. Richberg and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins were said to be arraigned against Hugh S. Johnson on what some termed the issue of "one man control" of the Blue Eagle.

The Washington Post said a showdown had been asked from the President. Richberg, chief coordinator of the recovery drive, said he had no idea where reports of the split originated. Whatever the argument was, he said, it certainly was not personal. He indicated it might not be so serious as represented.

The issue is said to be vitally intertwined with the future set-up of NRA, which the President and his aides are not drafting. As the Post defines the dispute, it revolves around the question whether a powerful board shall rule NRA, with the administrator under it, or whether the administrator shall have the real control, with the board acting more in an advisory capacity.

Johnson's opponents in the disagreement are said to feel that he wants the latter alternative, although it was he who recommended that NRA be managed by a board instead of by one man.

If Board Wins.

If the powerful board idea wins, it is said, important changes can be expected. The Post said they probably would be in the direction of curtailing price fixing, lightening the pressure of the brakes on industrial competition and enforcing more rigorously the collective bargaining provision of the act.

The question of how long General Johnson is to remain with NRA might conceivably depend on the outcome of the dispute. The indications have been that the White House would like him to carry out the reorganization of the NRA.

Licenses Revoked And Suspended

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 23—Four hundred and fifty-six certificates of automobile registration and licenses to drive were revoked or suspended by the commissioner of motor vehicles during the two weeks ended August 11. Of these cases 124 will require proof of financial responsibility before applications for new licenses will be considered. There were 94 revocations and 362 suspensions in New York city and vicinity, and 37 revocations and 101 suspensions in other parts of the state.

There were no revocations in Kingston and only one suspension, that of Lawrence Mamas, 26 New York street, for reckless prosecution.

Local ABC Board Clarifies New Law

According to information received by the Ulster County ABC Board there seems to be a misunderstanding among many applicants for a hotel or restaurant license for alcoholic beverages in regard to the requirements under the permanent alcoholic beverage control law which went into effect July 1. The board stated that several of the requirements under the new law are more exacting than under the temporary law. One thing in particular that seems not to be clear to some of these applicants is the proper location of the bar.

It is necessary for the proprietor of any hotel or restaurant applying for a license who is operating a bar to have it located in the dining room, as the law does not permit the establishment of a separate bar room or drinking place. A hotel may have more than one drinking room but the bar must be located in one of them. If this is not complied with, the investigators will be unable to approve the conditions in the premises and a report to that effect sent to the State Liquor Authority.

COTTEKILL

Cottekill, Aug. 23—The weather man was kind to the pupils of the Cottekill Reformed Church Sunday school on Tuesday, August 21. It was not only a beautiful day but a happy one for all the little tots and grownups who attended the picnic. The superintendent and his helpers were well pleased with the results. It made a real nice picture with all those tots closely assembled around the big long table, waiting patiently and eating their picnic luncheon, consisting of frankfurters, buttered rolls, mustard, sweet corn, watermelon and lemonade and more melons at the conclusion of the picnic. Mrs. Tongue entertained the kiddies with a beautiful Biblical story befitting this occasion. Music was furnished by the Misses Gertrude Short, Hetta B. Wilson and Emy F. Styles. The kiddies enjoyed a good time, with games supervised by V. H. Sachar, the superintendent. Prizes were furnished by Mrs. Burt Pine, followed by dancing, and several more guests arriving in the afternoon including the Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Van Tol of Stone Ridge. Singing was greatly enjoyed.

Worship at the Reformed Church will be on August 26 at 2:30 with the Rev. C. Van Tol officiating. All are cordially invited to come and listen to his good sermons.

The Sunday school will begin its fall term on September 2 at 1:30. All those wishing to attend this Sunday school are heartily invited to join the classes. Visitors are cordially welcomed.

If stormy, the festival will be held on the next clear evening.

Three Ask Judge For Jury Trial

A jury trial was demanded Wednesday by three defendants who appeared before Judge Walter Webber of the town of Ulster. The defendants, represented by Chris J. Flanagan, are John Bostel, charged with driving while intoxicated, Thomas Higo and Michael Tierney, charged with public intoxication. All three reside in East Kingston and the matter resulted from a collision near Paradise Inn on the Flatbush Road on August 10 when there was a collision between the car driven by Bostel and one driven by William Colster of 46 Josephine avenue, Kingston. The arrests were made by Trooper Arthur Reilly and the matter was adjourned at that time until Wednesday, August 22. At that time a jury trial was asked and the matter was set down for trial with a jury before Judge Webber on August 30.

Dies of Injuries Received in Crash

George Becker, 57, of Malden, died early Tuesday in Albany Hospital of injuries suffered Saturday night in an automobile accident near Ravena, in which Frank Meyers, 51, of Saugerties was instantly killed.

Coroner E. A. Hein, who made an investigation of the accident, ordered an autopsy on Becker, whose injuries were not believed to be critical when he was first brought to the Albany Hospital. Meyers was driving an automobile which crashed into two others cars when he attempted to pass traffic and then overturned in a ditch. August Hillje, also of Malden, another passenger, suffered only minor injuries for which he was treated at Memorial Hospital.

The autopsy showed that Becker suffered a ruptured spleen, punctured lung and a broken collar bone. For 12 years he had been employed by the Martin Cantine Company at Saugerties. A wife and daughter survive.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Pants Blaze, Firemen Called

Ticonderoga, N. Y.—Arthur Fleury, recluse, was cooking a meal in his tiny shack when his trousers caught fire.

"Help! Help! My pants are on fire," he yipped as he ran out the door. He succeeded in extinguishing the blaze and returned to his meal.

A few minutes later the village fire department arrived, sirens screaming. A neighbor had understood Fleury to say: "Help! Help! My camp's on fire."

For Beauty's Sake

Chicago—Actresses are the worst, wealthy women pretty bad, but even the average woman spends one eighth of her time primping.

The Cosmeticians Society estimated the time spent in beautification ranking wealthy women as spending one sixth of their time and actresses at least a fourth.

What they failed to estimate is the time the American male, of all classes spends waiting during the process.

Eagle Gets His Pork

Danbury, N. H.—Arthur Hollenbeck identified the thief who has been stealing his baby pigs. Between three and four o'clock every morning, he said, a large American Eagle, followed by six little eagles, swoops down on the farm, grabs a pig and flies away, followed by the little eagles.

Stork in a Dog Wagon

Weymouth, Mass.—When William Hall, dog catcher, left Lovell's corner he had one white setter in his cart. When he arrived at the pound he had seven. A white setter that Hall picked up gave birth to six pups en route.

Fans Cost Money

In superior court she filed a suit today asking a restaurateur to defray the expenses incurred when his dog took a fancy to the fans.

Itemized were: Feathers, $2,500; sentiment, $5,000; fright in dog encounter, $2,500—total, $10,000.

Out of the Jungle

Kenosha, Wis.—Donald Newport, 5, rigged a rope to a tree in his back yard and a la Tarzan he swung back and forth over imaginary alligators and jungle beasts snapping from the alley below.

On one of his breath-taking swings, along came an auto. Donald crashed through the windshield and suffered severe cuts.

Ah, my Heart!

Chicago—Among the troubles that beset Joseph Burns, 17, today was a disquieting discovery of the doctor.

He was already in a jam with the police over the matter of some stolen jewelry and a revolver found in his possession for which he was sentenced to one year.

The prison doctor gave him a going-over today and found, among other irregularities, Joseph's heart is on the wrong side.

RETAILERS MAKE GOOD

The facts about a situation are often so different from the popular idea of it. Consider the retail business. Even before the depression much was heard about the pitiable plight of the small, independent business. Chain store systems and big businesses were crowding the little fellows to the wall. Department of Commerce reports covering all of 1933 reveal an opposite trend. At the end of 1933, after four years of depression and after more than half a year of the New Deal, there were 1,520,239 retail establishments in the country as against 1,543,158 in 1929. The decline was only 1.5 per cent.

In earlier depressions, notably those of 1907 and 1921, fatalities among retail businesses were high. The independents did fall before the onslaught of the chains. In the present depression, for one reason or another, the independents are holding their own. Prof. Paul Nystrom, professor of marketing at Columbia University, gives as a partial explanation the fact that many chain-trained managers and employes who lost their jobs or quit because they saw no opportunities ahead proceeded to set up themselves as independents.

The existence and persistence of so many retail stores does not mean that all are prospering. Yet it seems clear that they are not doing so badly as was thought because failures and receiverships have been declining steadily. The outlook for this business group is very reassuring.

FIRE FROM HEAVEN.

August is the month of meteors. Shooting stars dart about the skies any time in August, but along about the second and third weeks there is a greater display than usual, culminating about the eleventh and twelfth of the month in a shower called the Perseids, as they seem to emanate from the constellation Perseus. The greatest display occurs shortly after midnight on those two nights, in the easterly part of the heavens. The meteors travel at the rate of about forty miles a second at a distance about seventy miles above the earth.

These meteors are fragments of some comet that has been captured by the solar system and broken up. They travel in orbits about the sun and are seen when their path intersects the path of the earth about the sun. Their light is caused by the friction which ensues when they come in contact with the earth's atmosphere. So if you saw them last week, they were not a sign that the universe was all excited because your best girl had promised to be yours, but merely the normal course of the starry fires of August.

RAIN

Blessed rain has been falling over a large part of the country, including the drouth-stricken area. It comes too late, of course, to save certain crops long since hopelessly burned up. Its beneficent effects, none the less, are almost immeasurable.

Resumption of normal rainfall, or some excess rainfall for a while, will begin to fill up dried wells, restore water to dry creek and river beds, raise the levels of ground water, cool off the feverish cities. And in addition to the material benefits of the belated rain, there is the tremendous lift it brings to the human spirit. We all knew it would rain again some time, but faith and courage were sorely tried as the scorching sun, the dust storms and the vanishing water supplies became the daily portion. Now, rain has fallen, more will fall. The thirsty land drinks as deeply as it may. The thirsty soul is refreshed and revived.

IRRIGATING AN EMPIRE.

The project to irrigate the Imperial Valley has been begun. The 80-mile canal across the desert and wastelands to the Colorado River is to be 200 feet wide and 20 feet deep. It is expected to end danger of crop-ruin and flood for some half-million acres of what except for these canals is the best and most fertile of farm land. Four years will be needed for the completion.

When one considers the empires of the ancient world and the rulers whose names have come down in history as fortunate the banks of the old growth for mankind and compares those old waterways with this new one some of them look pretty puny. Not for nothing was this great valley called Imperial. Ever now, it will in a future year be utilized to increase the resources of an empire.

SELF DEFENSE

Stanley Baldwin, Acting Prime Minister of England remarked recently that the Rhine was England's first line of defense. In an interview to the London Mail in terms which can be construed as a sort of reply [illegible]

It is the disciplined conviction of the Nazi movement that war can benefit nobody but only bring about a general ruin. Nineteen-eighteen was a lesson and a warning to us.

We ask only that our present frontiers shall be maintained, and believe me we shall never fight again except in self-defense.

This is a noble satisfying sound. Hearing it the world rejoices. But it could rejoice more heartily if it were sure that Der Fuehrer could give them a satisfactory definition of self-defense.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO

Aug. 23, 1914—The newly organized Red Monograms defeated the Poughkeepsie Hustlers at McVey's Field.

Aug. 23, 1924—The street department was busy grading Andrew street preparatory to the laying of an asphalt pavement.

An outdoor meeting of the local Ku Klux Klan held near Port Ewen, and seven new members were received.

Two young men, summer boarders, amused themselves by shooting out 17 window panes in the school at Whiteport. They were held for grand jury action.

The Poughkeepsie Gas & Electric Company defeated Kingston Gas & Electric Company men at baseball here.

Edward Arnold, a young boy of Abeel street, injured when knocked down by an auto.

H. G. Wells's idea of Utopia includes a writing room and a bedroom, a secretary or typist within call, an abundant library, a one-way telephone, beautiful scenery outside which could be changed frequently, and a life of fruitful peace. That certainly is something new in Utopias, but it has its appeal.

That Body of Yours

LOW BACK ACHE

By far the most common cause of low back pain is absorption from some septic focus or spot.

A common place which is never suspected by the patient, because there is no pain in the mouth, is chronic abscess of the roots of the teeth.

Now the dentist is naturally anxious that the patient keep his own teeth, in fact when a tooth is suspicious he may clean out the canal and fill the tooth and think no more about it. If, however, the dentist knew that the patient was suffering with low back pain, he would likely extract the tooth or teeth, or talk it over with the patient's physician. Often the offending tooth is holding one end of some bridge-work in the mouth and the loss of the tooth would mean considerable expense to the patient.

It often happens that a patient with low back pain will consult his physician and when asked about his teeth will tell the physician that he has had an X-ray of his teeth and that the dentist says that they are all right or at least has not suggested extracting any of them.

From this information the physician may then search elsewhere for the infection—tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder, large intestine, and fail to locate it.

In a large number of cases he will find that the patient is constipated and that absorption of wastes from the large bowel is responsible for the backache.

The gall bladder is also often at fault, and in thin individuals the backache may be due to a dropping down of the organs of the abdomen. Chronic appendicitis causes some cases of backache.

Many cases are due to poor posture—poor position of the body sitting or standing.

However, most cases are due to infection and the commonest infection is bad teeth.

While the tonsils are often at fault, they should not be removed until all suspected teeth are first removed, as it is embarrassing to physician and distressing to patient to have the tonsils removed and the low back pain be just as bad several months afterwards.

After suspected teeth are removed the pain in the back may grow worse for a short time owing to the torn blood vessels about the teeth absorbing the poison direct, but this pain soon decreases and finally disappears in a few weeks or months.

Prehistoric Rain Marks Slab

A slab of prehistoric mud, bearing the marks of raindrops that fell millions of years ago, is among the acquisitions of a museum at Yale. It bears evidence of a passing shower.

About the most universally appealing thing so far published about the Dionne quintuplets was that picture of the daily washing on the line.

BAD TEMPER

LITTLE John lay in his crib and sucked his daily ration of zwieback. When all that remained was a few sticky crumbs his mother appeared with a washrag. As her shadow fell across the crib little John stiffened, clutched his breath, and then, with a roar like that of an angry bull, gave vent to his rage. He kicked and fought and howled and his mother battled valiantly to connect him and the washrag.

Now there was no reason for this temper that any mortal mind could conceive. He had been carefully tended, gently handled. He was clean and apparently comfortable. He did not want to be disturbed. He wanted to lie as he was, sticky crumbs and sticky hands and face. He resented being disturbed in his serene contemplation of a pleasant world.

His mother calmly, (apparently calm, for she was aquiver underneath) finished washing his face and hands, wiped them dry, in spite of his struggles, drew down the shades and left him howling. He continued yelling for about fifteen minutes. For the first few his shouts were terrific and continuous. Then they lessened somewhat in force, and he began to space them as his energy drained. Down, down, down, dropped his voice, until at the end of twenty terrible minutes his cries ceased and he fell asleep.

Meanwhile, his mother was having her troubles. Grandma was indignant. "Why don't you go to that child? What do you mean by allowing him to cry like that? He'll hurt himself and then what will you think about yourself? It's cruel, that's what it is. You ought to be ashamed of yourself. I never let you cry like that. If you don't go and pick him up, I will."

That is why mothers grow old before their time. Struggling with the children is hard enough but when one must struggle with the various grownups who concern themselves with those same children, the burden becomes almost too hard to bear.

All children show temper. The well-trained child soon learns that it is useless, a waste of energy that brings him nothing but silence, isolation and weariness. The ill-trained ones, those who are picked up, coaxed, soothed and petted into good humor, keep on indulging in tantrums until they become behavior problems that only the vexed child specialist can manage.

Do nothing you can help that will rouse a child's temper. Handle him gently and do not provoke him to anger. Don't tease him. But when he gets into a temper because he must follow routine, because he must consider someone beside himself, ignore him as completely as possible.

Silence, complete quiet, is the best response to a temper tantrum. This is not always possible but one can come as close to it as conditions admit. Children learn to control temper when they discover through experience that it brings them nothing but inconvenience.

WHEN WORLDS COLLIDE

By EDWIN BALMER & PHILIP WYLIE

Synopsis of Preceding Instalment:

Two planets, Bronson Alpha and Bronson Beta, torn away from another star, are approaching the earth and the scientists of the world, except the headstrong Dr. Cyrus Hendron of New York, are planning the Space Ship on which to transfer Bronson Beta when Bronson Alpha wipes out the earth. The scientists' discovery of the planets is confirmed by photographs taken by Prof. Bronson in South Africa and rushed by David Rannicott by plane to Hendron and the financier Eve, his assistant. The first time the planets approach within four miles will engulf all coastal regions so that only about one-fifth of the world's population will survive. Eight months later, on the second approach, the end of the world. The Washington government is moving the trained and mobile population to the Mississippi valley. Eve and Tony Drake have been deeply in love but Hendron, as head of the world's scientists, handed forcibly as the League of the Last Days, has forbidden them to marry and thus interfere with his plans for them. Hendron has not yet been able to find a metal or an alloy which will withstand the heat and pressure of atomic energy to be used in preserving the Space ship. However, work on the giant rocket has been started at a centennial Hendron established in northern Michigan where the earthquakes that will accompany the great tides caused by the Bronson Bodies will do a minimum of damage. The night before Hendron and his immediate party are to fly to Michigan the tides rush through the streets of New York. Tony's mother is murdered on her Connecticut estate by looters.

INSTALLMENT 14

Eve was at a tiny table where a blue flame burned below a coffee percolator, and where oil lamp, following the failure of electricity, augmented the faint gray of approaching dawn.

Was it the light, Tony wondered, or was Eve this morning really so pale? He came to her and whatever the rules for this day, he claimed her with his arms and kissed her.

"Now," he said with some satisfaction, "you're not so pale." She did not disengage herself at once; and before she did she clung tightly to him for a moment. Then she said, "You've got to have your coffee now, Tony."

"I suppose so . . . But there's no stimulant in the world like you, Eve."

She turned the tiny cap of the coffeepot, filled a cup for him, him, one for herself. A few minutes later they went down together.

The rushing ebb of the tremendous tide was swirling less than a foot deep over the pavement, and was falling so rapidly that the curb emerged even while they were watching. From upper floors where many automobiles had been stored against the tide, cars were reaching the street. One drove in the splash Tony and Eve and stopped. The driver turned it over to them; and Tony took the wheel with Eve beside him.

They went with all possible speed, no longer encountering the tide itself, but lurching thru vast puddles. Debris from offices, shops and tenements swept by the tides bestrewed the street.

A few people appeared: a couple of motorcycle police, not in the least concerned with cars, were making some last inspection of the city.

Bodies lay in the street, and now on the right a haze of smoke drifted from an area that had burned down during the night.

The East River, when they reached it, was a torrent low in its channel being sucked dry toward the sea. Wreckage strewed the strangely exposed bottom. The bridge: a few miles more of flood debris in streaming streets. Then towns and villages which also had been overswept.

Now the country with its higher hills whereon Tony and Eve marked the line left by the water at its height. They dipped through empty villages and rose to hamlets whose inhabitants still lingered, staring in a dulled wonderment at the speeding car. The effect of the vast desolation beat into the soul, derelict, helpless people, occasional burning houses, a loose horse or a wandering sheep—emptiness, silence.

They climbed a slope with a sharp turn which was blocked; and there two men sprang at him. Tony jerked out his pistol; but today—and though he was on his way to his mother who was murdered—he could not pull the trigger on these men. He beat down one with the butt, instead, and with the barrel cowed the other.

He got the car clear and with Eve drove on. And—how was the road home! Home. His home, where he had been born and where he was a little boy. Home, the home that had been his father's and his grandfather's and before that for four generations. Down this road from his home, some man named Drake had gone to fight in the Great War, the War of the Rebellion, in 1812, and to join the army of Washington.

Tony tried not to think about his mother yet. Eve placed her hand over his which held the steering-wheel. "You'll let me stay close beside you, Tony," she appealed.

"Yes. We're almost there."

Familiar landmarks bobbed up on both sides, everywhere: a log cabin he had built as a boy; here was

Two men sprang at them. Tony jerked out his pistol. He beat down one with the butt, and with the barrel cowed the other.

the way to the old well—the "revolutionary well."

"Here we are."

The house was before them, white, calm, confident. Tony's heart leaped. How he loved it—and her who had been its spirit! How often she had stood in that doorway awaiting him.

Some one was standing there now—an old woman, slight, white-haired. Tony recognized her—Mrs. Haskins, the minister's wife. She advanced toward Tony, and old Hezekiah Haskins took her place in the doorway.

"What happened?"

Old Haskins told Tony, as kindly as he could:

"She was alone; she did not feel afraid, though all the village and even her servants had fled. The band of men came by. She did not try to keep them out. Knowing her—and judging by what I found—she asked them in and offered them food. Some of them had been drinking; or they were mad with the intoxication of destruction. Some one shot her cleanly—once, Tony. It is certain, Tony, she did not suffer."

Tony could not speak. Eve clung to his hand. "Thank God for that, Tony!" she whispered.

Briefly Tony unclasped his hand from Eve's and met the old minister's quivering grasp. He bent and kissed Mrs. Haskins' gray cheek.

"Thank you. Thank you both," he whispered. "You shouldn't have stayed here; you shouldn't have waited for me. But you did."

* * *

Old Hezekiah and his wife, and Orson the sexton, and Tony Drake and Eve Hendron stood on the hilltop where the men of the Drake blood and the women who reproduced them in all generations of memory lay buried. A closed box lay waiting its lowering into the ground.

"Hear my prayer, O Lord; and with thine ears consider my calling . . . For I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner as all my fathers were."

"Oh, spare me a little, that I may recover my strength before I go hence, and be no more seen."

Old Hezekiah Haskins held the book before him, but he did not read. A thousand times in his fifty years of the ministry he had repeated these words.

Men and children of men on Bronson Beta too. Men millions and thousands of millions of years in the making. Arctic time—protein the seas. Hundreds of millions years, while life slowly developed in the seas. Hundreds of millions more, while it emerged from the seas; a hundred million more, while reptiles ruled the land, the sky and water. Then they were swept away; mammals came; and man—a thousand million years of birth and death and birth again before even the first brick could be laid in the oldest city on Bronson Beta, which men on earth had seen last night with their telescopes.

"For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday; seeing that is past as a watch in the night.

"For when thou are angry, all our days are gone; we bring our years to an end like a tale that is told."

The sexton and old Hezekiah alone could not lift the box to lower it. Tony had to help them with it. He did; and his mother lay beside her husband.

Tonight, when the huge Bronson Alpha and Bronson Beta with its terrible cities of its own shall have set on this side of the world again, the tide might rise over this hill. What matter. His mother lay where she would have chosen. A short time now, and all this world would end.

"I'll take you away," Tony was saying to the old minister and his wife and the older sexton. "We're flying west tonight to the central plateau. We'll manage somehow to take you with us."

"Not me," said the old sexton. "Do not take me from the will of the Lord!"

Nor would the minister and his wife be moved. They would journey today, when the water receded, into the higher hills; but that was all they would do.

* * *

The airplane settled to earth on the high ground between Lake Michigan and Lake Superior, just as the Bronson Bodies, appallingly large, rose over the eastern horizon. Nearly a thousand people came from the great cantonment to greet Tony and Hendron's daughter. The scientist had given up his New Mexico venture entirely, and brought his congregation of human beings all to his Michigan retreat.

Greetings, however, were not fully made until the Bronson Bodies had been observed. Beta now exceeded the moon, and it shone with a pearly luster and a brilliance which the moon had never possessed. Around it was an aureole of soft radiance where its atmosphere, thawed by the warmth of the sun it so rapidly approached, had completely resumed its gaseous state.

But Bronson Beta did not compare with the spectacle of Alpha. Alpha was gigantic—bigger than the sun, and seemingly almost as bright, for the clouds which streamed up from every part of its surface threw back the sun's light, dazzling, white and hard. There was no night. Neither Eve nor Tony had seen the camp in its completion; and when wonderment over the ascending bodies gave way to uneasy familiarity, Eliot James took them on a tour of inspection.

Hendron had prepared admirably for the days which he had known would lie ahead of his band picked community. There were two prodigious dining-halls: two buildings not unlike apartment houses in which the men and women were domiciled. In addition there was a building resembling a hangar set on end, which towered above the surrounding forests more than a hundred feet. At its side was the landing field, space for the sheltering of the planes, and opposite the landing field, a long row of shops which terminated in an iron works.

It was to the machine-shops and foundry that Eliot James last took his companions.

"The crew here," he said to Eve, "has already finished part of the construction of the Ark which your father is planning. If we wanted to, we could build a battleship here; in the laboratories anything that has been done could be repeated; and a great many things have been accomplished that have never been done before. By tomorrow night I presume that the entire New York equipment will have been reinstalled here."

Tony whistled. "It's amazing. Genius, sheer genius! How about food?"

Eliot James smiled. "There is enough food for the entire congregation as long as we will need it."

"Now show us the 'Ark.'"

Money Noises

Washington, Aug. 22—The inflation whoopee has started again. It is being encouraged particularly by the fact that every near-insider in Washington and New York has heard that a leading government adviser recently predicted it, off the record, to fifty or more people. He did not say how much or when.

The method he chose to spread the word has caused many people to doubt the value of the prediction. When anyone lets so many people in on such a highly speculative secret, it usually is not a very good secret.

The truth seems to be that the administration is trying to sing two different tunes on the money piano at the same time. That is what was done on silver. The nationalization motif had an inflationary undertone, but a thoroughly firm money melody. The inflationary hints are supposed to drive stagnant money out of hoarding before prices go higher. The sound money melody is designed to sooth the ears of government bondholders.

Method

More interesting than that, however, is the fact that certain money experts have worked out a specific plan whereby the government could undertake a convincing moderate money inflation. They base it on what already has been done with gold and silver.

It is highly desirable in undertaking inflation for the government to seize all gold and silver. Such action keeps these precious metals in the country and yet out of public circulation in competition with paper money. That has been done. Another desirable step is to devalue gold and get a big reserve profit in the treasury. That has been done.

The next step would be to devalue the silver dollar commensurately with gold, thus accumulating a silver reserve in the treasury.

By thus cutting the content of the silver dollar, the treasury also could hasten the day on which silver would be established at the promised 25 per cent ratio with gold. It would have to buy very little additional silver to reach the ratio goal. The treasury would also then have a theoretical silver as well as gold "profit" against which it could issue 3½ to 5 billions of new currency. That would be a limited monetary inflation and a fairly sound one because the new money would be backed by gold and silver, although at a depreciated value.

Workings

It may sound complicated, but it is a relatively simple bookkeeping trick. The government merely increases the price of its gold and silver monetary reserves arbitrarily, and uses the profit to issue currency.

How much good it would do is a matter for debate.

The new currency issue probably would be used to pay off the public debt. That would be the logical thing to do. In that case, the money would only replace existing bonds in banks and insurance companies now already overloaded with money. However, it might create an inflationary psychology and thus stimulate buying.

Prospects

This is just one of the plans being talked of—in fact, it is the only logical inflationary plan being discussed. There is no reason to believe it will be adopted. Instead, there are very good reasons for believing that the government has made no definite monetary plans for more than 30 days in advance. It seems to be feeling its way along cautiously, with no commitments publicly or privately, judiciously delaying its decision until it sees what the future economic situation will turn out to be.

Nothing could be done about this plan anyway until November 9. The government allowed ninety days for seizure of silver and the ninety-day period will expire then. Also, the congressional elections and the fall financing of the treasury will then be completed.

Mark it down in your hat for a check along about November 15.

Hyde Park.

Mr. Roosevelt has a secret administrative use for his home at Hyde Park. His associates knew he is not going there merely for a month's vacation.

The inside of that is that, in the White House, he lives like General Johnson in a goldfish bowl. If important people are called in to see him, everyone knows about it immediately.

Notes.

Domestic sugar refiners were deeply irked by the Cuban treaty to be made public tomorrow. They worked hard on the inside to limit the treatment given Cuban refiners, but were unsuccessful.

Ben Cohen is back from Europe to write the forthcoming social reform legislation. The presidential committee will submit ideas and he will assemble them into court-proof legislation. He will not take his pen in hand until he finds out how the railroad pension court case is decided.

The best government bond authorities swear it was the western banks which took profits when the market went down recently. However, they are all back in, and the market is in good shape to absorb the September treasury financing.

Pilgrimages to the tomb of Von Hindenburg are made by such throngs of mourning Germans that it is said hundreds are unable to gain admittance. Isn't there some danger of Hitler's becoming jealous?

British Celts' History Still Remains Mystery

That the Celts had any written records there is great reason to doubt, although there are inscriptions on certain rude stone monuments in parts of Wales, as in the southernmost counties of Munster, Ireland, consisting of long and short lines and known as Ogamic characters, the antiquity of which is not well determined, as far as deciphered, these inscriptions throw no direct light on the origins of the Celtic race.

Their spoken language, reduced to writing after the introduction of Christianity, is the only key of any importance to their origin. This language plainly marks them as an early offshoot of the Aryan family, the common Asiatic stock from which the chief races of Europe have descended.

Neither Caesar's commentaries nor the writings of Tacitus and other historians of the period of the Roman domination convey evidence that the Britons had any knowledge of letters until the Roman and Greek characters were taught them.

Neither do these historians preserve any oral traditions of the British bards or druids calculated to shed much light upon the early history of the Celtic race.

Scottish Terrier May Be Branch of Skye Terriers

Authorities are at great variance regarding the "Scotty's" origin, some asserting there never was such a dog as the "Scotty," pointing to his prick ears as proof that he is a mongrel. Others assert he is an offshoot of the Skye terrier or Dandie Dinmont and that the only true Scotty is a white one. Still others contend he is merely a manufactured product of Aberdeen. Strong presumption, however, indicates he is a transmutation of the Cairn and the West Highland white terrier, which is a white Cairn, says a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

In its native Scotland, the breed has been known for more than a century, but for more than half this period was without an accepted name. After years of bitter dispute between fanciers of Scotland and northern England, he was finally labeled with the proud title of Scottish terrier, supplanting such names as Aberdeen, Highland, Cairn and Scotch. The only survival of these misnomers is Aberdeen, which many still regard as a different breed . . . an advantage often employed by the unscrupulous dealer who sells as an "Aberdeen," a dog too faulty to dispose of as a Scottish terrier.

Peace Conference of 1861

In January, 1861, the legislature of Virginia passed a resolution inviting the states to appoint delegates to meet at Washington to consider an adjustment of the national difficulties then pending. This conference met February 4 and adjourned February 27. Twenty-one states were represented. As a result of its deliberations, a constitutional amendment was proposed which prohibited slavery north of the parallel of 36 degrees 30 minutes northern latitude; south of this line it was to exist without restraint. It denied the right of passing laws giving freedom to slaves temporarily in the free states or to fugitive slaves, and forbade congress to control slavery in the southern states, but prohibited the slave trade. The amendment was brought up in the senate, but failed of introduction in the house.

Andorra

One of the geographical and historical curiosities of Europe is the little Republic of Andorra by the French Pyrenees. From remote centuries, for its origin is buried in legend, it has held its own, and is the sole example in western Europe of the "temporal power" of the church, for the bishop of Urgel nominates a provost, who with one appointed by France and an elected council of 24 govern the republic. One hundred and seven-five square miles is the area of this wild land of rugged mountains and tempestuous rivers. It boasts 44 villages. Andorra is a solemn place; the very inhabitants seem to copy their ruggedness and costume from the mountains and a soberness and taciturnity is in all they do.

Cowlick Human

While it may be a source of constant irritation to the mother who likes to have her little boy look neat and well-groomed, part of the time at least, the cowlick is an indication that its owner is a little farther removed from "cousin ape" than some of our scientists would have us believe. According to the Smithsonian institution, it is something which is never found on the ape. The orang-utan has a hair formation which does resemble it some, but it is way back on the head and never near the crown where the plume appears on "Sonny's" head.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Rigid Investigation

The Diamond Exchange in Antwerp probably uses more care in admitting new members than any other business in the world, owing to the great necessity for honesty and honor. For a year a photograph and description of the applicant must hang in police headquarters and the Exchange itself thoroughly investigates his past life. If no objection to him can be found during this time, he is admitted.—Collier's Weekly.

48-Hour Week Ahead for 'Scarface' Capone

Notorious Racketeer Is Now at Alcatraz Island Penitentiary With 90 Other Criminals, All New Arrivals.

San Francisco, Aug. 23 (AP)—Prison labor—48 hours a week of it—was in store today for Al "Scarface" Capone and 92 other convicts transferred yesterday from other prisons to the new escape-proof Federal penitentiary on Alcatraz Island.

An eight-hour work period for each day except Sunday has been mapped out for the new arrivals including the former Chicago gang chief, Warden James A. Johnston said.

The convicts, whose arrival increased the prison population to an even 100, will labor in the prison laundry, the clothing shop, shoe shop, kitchens and at maintenance occupations.

The transfer of Capone to the new prison, which Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said was for convicts who attempted to maintain outside contacts at other penitentiaries and were potential jail breakers, brought a protest from his attorney at Atlanta, Frank A. Doughman.

Capone himself protested when he was shaken from a sound sleep at Atlanta and hustled aboard the Alcatraz-bound train. Against such treatment for "a model prisoner," Doughman declared:

"They admitted to me," the attorney said, "that Capone's record was good."

The former Chicago gangster, convicted of income tax evasion and sentenced to 11 years, will be eligible for parole in a year and a half.

Why Worry?

We're on our way, and we don't know where
What's more, nobody seems to care.

Growing old is a lot like undressing in an upper berth of a sleeping car—few can do it gracefully.

Patient—What are the chances of my recovering, doctor?

Young Doctor—One hundred per cent. Medical records show that nine out of every ten die of the disease you have. Yours is the tenth one I've treated. Others have died. You're bound to get well. Statistics is statistics.

When you find a man sad, the chances are he is thinking of himself too much.

Interviewer—Do you believe that the younger generation is on the road to perdition?

Octogenarian—Yes, sir; I've believed that I'm nigh on to 60 years.

It doesn't hurt any of us to have to go without things, if the people we have been trying to get ahead of have to go without them, too.

Child—Mother dear, when the fire goes out where does it go?

Mother—My dear boy, I don't know. You might just as well ask me where your father goes when he goes out.

Your earnings may or may not depend on your yearnings. It's all up to you.

Rabe—How is Pennington?
Holt—Flat on his back.
Rabe—Why I saw him dancing with a pretty blonde last night.
Holt—So did his wife.

The rule to achieve success in speculation sounds very simple. It can be told in four short simple words. Buy high. Sell low. Nothing could appear more to contain less difficulty. But as a matter of fact it includes about all of the difficulty in the world.

Woman—What are you going to give your husband for his birthday?
Neighbor—It depends on how much he wants to spend for it.

The back yard fence is a thing of the past—but the back yard gossip is still with us.

The young man had proposed to the pretty chorus girl and had been accepted. Came the day when he was taken home to see mother, a very tough and forbidding-looking person.

Mother (with a ghoulish smile)—So you are the young man who is going to become my son-in-law, are you?

Suitor (groaning)—Good heavens. I'd never thought of it in that light before.

To go from where you are, to where you want to arrive, may be largely a matter of your own personal planning. How nicely and insistently are you doing that job?

After the mortgage is foreclosed the poor owner has no door to keep the wolf away from.

A lot of fellows who start in to build a reputation don't get any further than just laying the corner stone.

Doctor—You should exercise before breakfast!
Woman—Oh, doctor, I do! It is just the awfullest job getting my husband up to get the breakfast.

Doing business with a man who believes that everybody is dishonest, is rarely safe.

Shokan Lodge Holds 53rd Birthday Party

West Shokan, Aug. 23—Shokan I. O. O. F. Lodge celebrated its 53rd birthday anniversary following the regular lodge session Saturday evening, August 18, when visitors from various neighboring I. O. O. F. and Rebekah Lodges joined with the home members assembling in the lodge room.

Among the group of speakers who shared the platform were Past Grand Stephen Cordes, the guest of honor, from Catskill Mountain Lodge, No. 487, West Saugerties; Past District Deputy Jacob H. Rogers from Lodge No. 929, Highland; District Deputy-elect Charles E. Sickler of Garfield Lodge, No. 422, Ulster Park; Past Grand Newton VanEtten of Aretas Lodge, No. 172, Kingston, presiding district deputy of the Ulster county encampment branch; Mrs. Mildred Bush of Olive Rebekah Lodge, No. 170, past district deputy of Ulster District No. 2, and the present deputy, Mrs. Mabel Bode, of Colonial Rebekah Lodge, Kingston. Past District Deputy Arthur E. Trowbridge of Shokan Lodge, presided as master of ceremonies. Among other speakers called upon were the stalwart veteran Past Grand John Holliday of Garfield Lodge No. 422, for 55 years an Odd Fellow, also a veteran of the Civil War.

Brother Cordes, the only living representative of those present at the institution of Shokan Lodge at Brodhead Bridge 53 years ago, proved a well versed speaker. In his remarks which were most attentively listened to Brother Cordes, now 86, spoke of the evolution which he had witnessed during his lifetime. Born in Germany he as a boy had known six soldiers who had fought against Napoleon at Waterloo. As a young man he was a soldier in the Franco-German war of 1870. He later emigrated to America and eventually established himself in the trade of a blacksmith at West Saugerties. He had been instrumental in the establishing of the Odd Fellows Lodge there, he being then a member of Pioneer Lodge of Saugerties. At the time of the instituting of Shokan Lodge, as a member of the installing staff of District Deputy W. H. R. Raymond, he in company with another past Dictator drove from West Saugerties to Brodhead Bridge with a slow, traveling horse, arriving at 7:30 after seven and one quarter hours enroute.

In his notes on changing customs he described the small kerosene lights over a store room by the railroad crossing at Brodhead Bridge where Shokan I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 491, was instituted on that sweating August night and the degrees conferred upon several candidates. One of these was the late brother, James McMillin. This first meeting place he compared with the present large well furnished electrically lighted hall owned by Shokan Lodge, with its large and prosperous membership. His talk was very heartily applauded. Later many present sought to shake his hand and express personal appreciation.

There was a marked feeling of regret upon the absence of Past District Deputy Harry A. Lamouree of Catskill Mountain Lodge who had on that day been taken suddenly ill. Following the speaking program refreshment tables in the auditorium below, were visited.

Hot Springs Girl Hailed as Prodigy

Hot Springs, Ark.—Hailed as one of the outstanding child prodigies of the age, Janet Grant, eight, of Hot Springs, has been invited to appear in recital in Washington by the International Art Forum.

Janet spurns jazz, concentrating on the music of the masters. At four and one-half she played Beethoven. At five she mastered Bach's compositions.

She is a master of both violin and piano, performing on both with amazing technique. Despite her unusual feats in music, she is a normal, unspoiled child. She weighs 90 pounds, is active, healthy and is advanced in studies as far as the normal fifteen-year-old.

ARTICLE I. PENALTY. Any person, who himself or by his clerk, agent or employee, shall act as a hawker, peddler or solicitor as herein defined, without a license, or shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, or who, having had his license revoked, shall continue to act as a hawker, peddler or solicitor, shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than $25.00 or more than $100.00 and each day on which such violation continues shall constitute a separate offense.

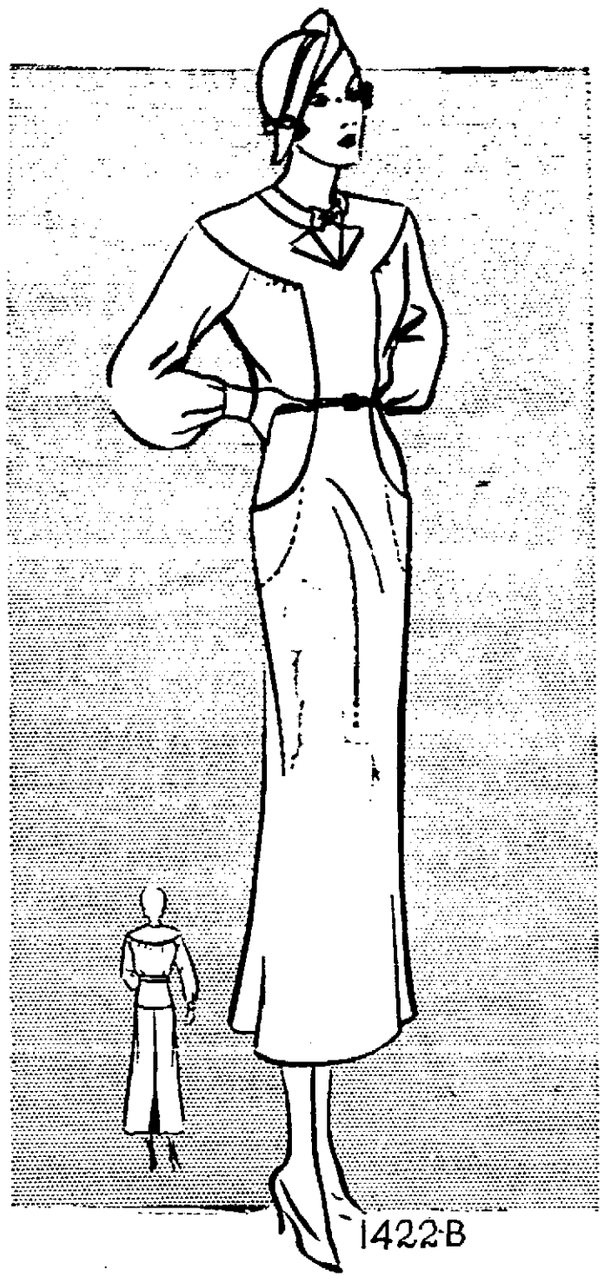
A Frock for Trotting About Town In



For wear on those first serious shop through the stores, after Labor Day one must have a good looking practical dress that reflects at least a few of the fall trends without being obviously high style—in other words, a casual frock, simply made, will be needed.

Among the new trotteurs seen in the advanced collections, the one we have sketched today boasts more than the usual number of advantages. Study it and you'll see. Its lines, viewed from an angle of smartness, are charmingly nonchalant and unstudied, and from a stand-point of wearability they abound in details that make for a sustained feeling of comfort and well-being. The acceptance of frocks of this same type, during the summer, has inspired the American designers to do bigger and better things for college girls and women with slim youthful figures.

For informal town wear, or for wear on the campus, there is nothing nicer than a variety of little frocks like this one. Work in it, or play in it, and still it retains its individuality. The yoke conforms to the broad-shoulder requirements—the sleeves terminate their modish fullness in trim wrist band (very new), and the skirt provides, not only pockets, but a pleat in the back that will act as a life-saver on days when every minute is accounted for.

These dresses come either in wool, or in heavy, serviceable silk. Fall novelty cottons are suitable for it, too, and so is the new velveteen that seems more pliable than any we have ever seen before.

LIVE BUSINESS MEN ADVERTISE IN THE FREEMAN

Stones and Society Topic Before Rotary

Speaking consistently and entertainingly, the Rev. Alex Hawke, who is the summer pastor of St. John's Church, addressed the members and guests of Rotary at the Governor Clinton yesterday at noon with a discussion that centered around the value of stone in the building processes of mankind. His talk centered around his first impression of Kingston, and the thing that intrigued the speaker most when coming to the city was the number of stone houses which stand in memory of Revolutionary times.

The Rev. Mr. Hawke stated in the beginning of his speech that various kinds of stone held a fascination for him. There are so many different kinds. Some have beauty and little strength, others, because of their makeup, can withstand the ravages of time. He likened the stone that goes into the building of a structure to an individual. Some are misfits, and have to be discarded. A building, like a community, must have unified strength in order to stand. If there is one weak link in the structure, the building or community may not necessarily fall, but it will place an added responsibility upon the rest of the structure. That, in the opinion of the speaker, was the flaw in the social order of today. Too many people are carrying the burden of others because those others have failed to hold up their share of the responsibility.

"You never see the stone that goes into the foundation of a building," said the speaker, "but you see the stone that makes the pinnacles and the pattern of the structure. Humanity is a lot that way. There are outstanding men in this country, who shine above the rest of the people, but back of them is the foundation, the most essential part of the structure. Without this foundation, there would be no structure, and it is the duty of the mass of humanity who make up this foundation to keep it strong and uncrumbling."

Eat Cat's Flesh

Cat's flesh is much favored in China as a specific for liver diseases, for which it is supposed to be as efficacious as cod-liver oil. Black cats furnish the best meat and in some districts are regularly reared for sale.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

The writer of this story needs no introduction. You've heard him on the air, seen him on the screen, and now will sample his journalistic efforts.—

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 22.—I love to sing—and I can thank my lucky stars that other people like to hear me! Because, if they didn't, I'd be a mass of welts and bruises from being on the receiving end of old shoes, bottles and tin cans. But, it wouldn't stop me.

I don't think anything ever could have stopped me. I'm one of those old-time "bathroom baritones" (since dignified by the title "crooner") and —in or out of the bathtub—brother, I sing!

But everybody seems to like to listen to me having a good time entertaining myself, and that's the reason I am where I am today.

I never consciously did anything to get ahead in the entertainment world. I liked to sing; the breaks came, and, ever since I can remember, I've had the grandest time in the world.

I'd probably be a terrible example to hold before anyone as the ideal self-made man. If it hadn't been for the breaks, I would be a small town lawyer today, struggling to pay for office space.

I was at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington, studying law, when everything started happening at once.

Al Rinker, my college pal, could play the piano. I could play the traps. And we played at college dances, until, one night, a theatre manager in Spokane heard us and booked our seven-piece outfit into his theatre. After a taste of singing behind the footlights, I didn't want to be a lawyer.

What is it about grease paint and footlights that gets under your skin and just about kills every other ambition?

Al and I had the bug bad. We went to Los Angeles to see what could be done there. One night, Paul Whiteman took a busman's holiday and that changed my whole life.

Al and I were doing a turn at a downtown theater and Paul dropped in. He made us an offer. When he went to New York, he took us with him to the big city. There Harry Barris joined us. We were the Original Rhythm Boys and that association kept up for three years, until Paul took us back to California to make "King of Jazz."

Once you've lived in California, you like to stay there. Al, Harry and I asked Paul to release us after the picture was finished, and he complied. We got a job at the Cocoanut Grove. I don't think a crazier guy ever lived than the Bing Crosby who sang at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles. Events really began happening in my life. One of them was Dixie Lee. We fell in love and were married and I don't think a happier couple exists in the world today. But I must have been a terror to live with in those days with a lot of success going to my head.

I finally went on the air. You know the rest. For twenty-one weeks, I earned $7,000 a week—all because, ever since I remember, I've entertained myself singing.

Since I've learned my lesson in business, I know how to take care of myself, and I'm salting away savings so that I won't have to worry for the rest of my life. The days when money burned a hole in my pocket are definitely over.

Along with success on the radio came offers from the coast again. Determined to make good, I went back to California, and made "The Big Broadcast" for Paramount, to which I am under contract. Since then I've made "College Humor," "Too Much Harmony," "We're Not Dressing" and "She Loves Me Not."

I seem to be headed for success and I'm glad that it has come to me at this time, when I am no longer a gay dog, but a business man with a frog in his throat.

Kingston: "I Give My Love" Wynne Gibson makes dramatic in this story of a woman's sacrifice for the man she loves and Miss Gibson gives herself an admirably gifted actress in a difficult and unsympathetic role. The story is taken from the novel of Vicki Baum, and the plot is far from new nor is the treatment exceptional. Paul Lukas turns in a noteworthy performance in a featured part.

Orpheum: "Social Register" and "Jaws of Justice." The opening feature discloses what occurs in upper crust society fun and gaiety. Colleen Moore, long absent from the screen, returns in the featured billing. "Jaws of Justice" offers Kazan, the wonder dog, in a stirring tale of dog devotion and bravery. Kazan proves he has the intelligence of a man and even greater faithfulness.

Broadway: "Elmer and Elsie" and "Ferocious Pal". George Bancroft, he-man character of the talking screen, is the star of the first double feature, and Frances Fuller is in the supporting cast. The story is ordinary, but the action is fairly brisk. "Ferocious Pal" stars Kazan, the dog marvel, in a story of dog justice. Ruth Sullivan, Eugene Toler and Tom London are numbered in the cast.

Tomorrow.

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Heart Song" and "Boss Cowboy." Enjoyable and petit is the first offering, with Lillian Harvey in the starring role. It's the story of a maid in the household of a duke. The duke suffers temporary blindness, and the girl sings to him. He falls in love with the voice, and when his eyesight returns, he spends his time seeking the voice that thrilled him in his blindness. Charles Boyer is in the supporting cast. "Boss Cowboy" is a western thriller with Buddy Roosevelt in the saddle.

Broadway: Same.

Announce Prizes In Garden Club Show

Kingston, Aug. 22—With the entries, the eighth annual flower show of the Shawangunk Garden Club opened yesterday at the Hoag Memorial Hall in Ellenville. The sweepstakes prize, a silver loving cup, awarded the exhibitor winning the largest number of points, was won by Mrs. William DuBois. The cup must be won three years in succession to become the possession of the winner. Last year it was held by Mrs. William Hughes and the year before by Gordon Elliott. There were 14 exhibitors this year.

The judges were representatives of the Middletown Garden Club. Exhibits were divided into 44 classes, grouped into nine sections. Ribbons were awarded first, second, and third prize winners.

Outstanding among the exhibits were the colonial tea tables. That arranged by Mrs. R. D. Clark was set with china and linen 85 years old. In perfect keeping was the centerpiece of fragrant petunias, nicotiana, and larkspur. A small round coffee table arranged by Miss Eleanor Rose was unusual with a tall slender silver pot, small gold and white china cups, and in a graceful little silver basket, sprays of candytuft. The tray which won first prize was of Mexican silver, the flower a single pale pink rosebud.

Several refreshment trays were shown, the first prize going to that exhibited by Mrs. Chandler Young on which the bouquet was very small but interesting in its selection of several kinds of flowers. Some of the trays were criticized by the judges as being too top-heavy.

Three junior exhibits attracted attention, the doll's tea table set by Virginia Grant, presided over by her big doll, being very pretty. Nancy Douglas had a darling arrangement of a miniature pewter tea set with a bouquet in proportion. Her arrangement of cosmos, classed as "What I Like to Exhibit," was lovely.

Particularly attractive were the arrangements of fruits and vegetables. In their low wide baskets or huge wooden bowls, mingling cool and sunny colors, they look very edible.

Two mantels were arranged. Although not competing against each other, that of Mrs. Roy Ball, with pink petunias in gold-trimmed white china vases on the ends and china figures and tray under the gold-framed oval mirror, received a "first" ribbon, while that of Mrs. Frank Hurd with its ship model flanked by books and a large bowl of Zinnias at each end, was a little too heavy and received a "second" ribbon.

Special consideration was given an antique boudoir complete with chair and hooked rug, and little vanity on which were laid jewelry and a nosegay, as if a young girl were dressing for a ball.

The nosegays and miniature bouquets were cleverly done and very lovely. A nosegay of tawny shades of flowers accented with blue and white, in a gold frill, was outstanding. Being oversize, it was not judged and first prize went to a quaint little nosegay of many kinds of small blooms, blue and yellow shades predominating. The most liked of the many miniature bouquets was a pink rosebud with forget-me-nots in a china watering pot two inches high. The smallest, truly a miniature, was a green bowl an inch in diameter with tiny dwarf marigolds.

Petunias received more attention than any other flower, taking most of the prizes in the artistic arrangements section. White petunias and misty baby's breath in a white china bowl was unostentatiously given first prize in the class of flowers and containers of the same color. First also was an arrangement of small card sized petunias with white fringed centers in a white oblong bowl in the section of arrangements in uniform containers supplied by the club.

Mrs. William DuBois's flower arrangement for a dinner table, a glass bowl of pale pink roses, pale and dark blue delphinium and baby's breath, set on an oblong mirror with a graceful blue glass bird beside it, was outstanding.

Two of the three entries in the men's class of "What I Like to Exhibit" were zinnias, the other double petunias.

There were a great many arrangements of flowers in pitchers, using trays for background, all of them in keeping with the colonial tone of the flower show. Considerable variety marked the flower arrangements, although the trays were all quite similar.

Of the potted plants the little orange tree with its ripening fruit and the Christmas cactus fully four feet in diameter commanded most attention.

The judges gave special mention to the collection of dahlias of queer and beautiful shapes and colors, grown from seed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fish of Woodburn.

The most noteworthy of the specimen exhibits was that of Mrs. John McDole's gladioli. She showed a very large specimen of a clear shell pink, lighter than salmon, grown from her own seed. One of the most curious flowers was a sunflower with the rim of large petals turned back like a frightened rabbit's ears, and in the center where the seeds should be, close packed tiny petals. It was all a sunny yellow.

Tea was served on the porch of the hall to the 150 people who attended the show yesterday afternoon and night. Girls in Dutch costumes selling vegetables from a wheelbarrow were a colorful note at the entrance.

Mrs. William L. Douglas is general chairman of the flower show which closes tonight. The president of the Garden Club is Mrs. R. G. Cox.

ACHIEVES FIFTIETH READING OF BIBLE

New York Physician Is Proud of His Record.

New York.—Bible stories never grow old to Dr. William Woodward, osteopathic physician and bookseller of Yonkers, who recently completed his fiftieth reading of the Bible and celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday.

Having no favorite passage, Doctor Woodward always reads the Bible from cover to cover, both the New and Old Testaments.

As a student of the Newton Theological Institution in 1873, Doctor Woodward began reading the Bible. A friend told him biblical passages could be easily memorized if one read them over 25 times.

Although he had little success in committing the Scriptures to memory, he became so interested in the Bible he has continued reading it since that time.

By 1925 he had read it 40 times, and remembering that by 1934 he would complete his fiftieth year as a Mason, he decided to make his readings of the Scriptures correspond.

Although he reads leisurely, as a rule, he once finished the Bible in 18 days, devoting as many as 12 hours a day to it.

He regards the Bible as the word of God, literally true throughout. In his own words: "Too many people now, and especially in New York city, read the Bible solely to disprove its truths. If there were fewer hypocrites in the Christian church, there would be less talk about the inaccuracies of the Bible."

Among his varied achievements, Doctor Woodward looks with pride on his degree as doctor of osteopathy, his law studies, his editorship of the Charleston News, and his 60 articles for the Encyclopedia Americana.

Prehistoric House Sites Along Missouri Studied

Lincoln, Neb.—Following the cold trail, left centuries ago across the Midwest by ancient man, Dr. Earl H. Bell, of the University of Nebraska, and five assistants are using two and one-half months of the summer near Wynot, Neb., to study prehistoric villages.

They are studying the remains of seventy-five antique habitations, the latest clew to the riddle of the origin of tribes which roamed the prairies hundred of years before Europeans appeared.

Doctor Bell found the house sites last summer on a bluff overlooking the Missouri river. The land there never has been plowed and the depressions, two or three feet deep, show up plainly. Some are sixty feet across.

Gold Miners in Brazil Can Sell Only to State

Rio De Janeiro.—By decree of the government all gold mined in the country will be purchased exclusively by the Banco do Brazil for account of the national treasury at the quotation prevailing at the time in the international market.

The government decree vests upon the Banco do Brazil all responsibility as to the purity of the metal purchased. Those engaged in the mining of gold in any form are required to file with the bank a monthly memorandum stating the quantity of metal extracted and the stock on hand. No gold can be offered for sale to private individuals and any who break the law are subject to heavy fines and imprisonment.

Things are so quiet in Austria just now that we are beginning to be afraid that somebody is up to something.

Excellent Work Is Being Done In Research Work By Colleges

By HARDEN COLFAX.
(Copyright by Consolidated News.

Washington, August 23.—The result of a corporation by the Pennsylvania State College to keep the benefits of scientific discoveries within reach of the public directs attention anew to the excellent work being done by American institutions of higher learning in reserving for the benefit of society in general the results of their research activities.

The new organization is to be known as the Pennsylvania Research Corporation. It is a non-profit making body, the sole purpose of which is to take out patents on inventions and important scientific discoveries made by the faculty and staff members of the college for the purpose of encouraging and advancing scientific research.

Several hundred research projects are under way continuously at the college and quite a number of them give promise of immediate and practical value to industry. Heavy water (the oxide of deuterium), or heavy hydrogen, will be produced on a commercial scale at about $1 a drop at the Pennsylvania State College. It will be sold at cost to scientists. It is expected that certain types of patented processes and devices can be made most effectively valuable to the public through licenses to one or more commercial or manufacturing agencies. The idea is to make selfish exploitation or misuse impossible.

Pennsylvania State College is the twentieth institution of higher learning in the United States to adopt this method of giving to the public the benefit of what its scientific investigators may work out. Along many different scientific lines, with a general view to the development of our natural resources, the aim is to make possible the starting of new industries. As a result, new jobs and new wealth will be created.

It is not solely a matter of profits. The current statements of most of the institutions which have developed these research organizations—Columbia, Toronto, St. Louis, Illinois, Lehigh, Johns Hopkins, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Cornell, California Universities and others—admit that it is often a matter of pride with men engaged in purely scientific investigation that their discovery should be given freely to the professional public.

It has been learned that "Pseudo-science by exaggeration." Therefore in the words of the head of the organization of the University of Wisconsin, the real profit of inventions provided by patent laws and the result is not only profit to the inventor and manufacturer but also a social gain.

Harvard University has announced that hereafter no member of its schools of medicine or public health shall "take out for his own benefit any profit on a patent upon any invention or discovery that affects the individuals of the public."

The records of the patent office show the assignment of a number of patents from these research organizations to the parent institutions or to other non-profit making agencies. These patents vary all the way from improved methods of preserving foodstuffs and treating cans of vegetable poisons to the development of chemical processes useful in industry.

Flower Exhibits at Dutchess Fair

Rhinebeck, Aug. 23—Flowers will receive a great deal of attention at the Dutchess County Fair to be held at Rhinebeck on August 28, 29, 30 and 31 with auto races on September 1. Already ground space to accommodate a tent with an area of 12,000 square feet has been put in shape.

A large number of clubs from Ulster, Columbia and Dutchess counties have entered in the contest for Garden Club exhibits. Last year Kinderhook Garden Club placed first in an exhibit which became the outstanding feature at the International Flower Show at Grand Central Palace in March, 1934. In addition to the various entries of flowers, considerable space is devoted to evergreen and nursery plantings which will be arranged around the outside of the flower tent. Ethan A. Coon of Rhinebeck, the efficient superintendent of past years, is again in charge.

Fish Lives on Land

Known as the mud skipper, a fish found in East Africa lives on land, but must keep its tail moist because it breathes through it.

San Francisco was first connected by telephone with the state capital at Sacramento on March 1, 1884, just a half century ago.

In other words, Santa Claus [illegible] on every day friend of [illegible] instead of a once a year [illegible] with a Christmas grab-bag. [illegible] outdoor play there are [illegible] roller skates, sidewalk bicycles, express wagons, doll carriages, velocipedes, coaster cars, balls, bats, [illegible] and all sorts of games, construction sets, blackboards, sewing materials, dolls, trains, carpentry sets, chemistry sets, toys that [illegible] industrial and housekeeping tasks, picture books, handicraft sets and knitting books are also provided for underprivileged children.

• • •

"By interesting the youngsters in constructive play in their homes, we give them real educational training," said Mrs. Rose Schwartz, director of the toy library. "When they are busy with these absorbing tasks they lose interest in play with the street gangs and they escape the delinquent influences that are always awaiting the bored and idle. The desire to play is fundamental in every child. It is as important to his spiritual welfare as food is to his body. If a child is deprived of his proper play facilities, his development is stunted. Playgrounds have already provided the slum child with an outlet for his energy that is better than the streets. But social service has neglected the child's home life. We could not possibly collect enough toys to let children keep them all. So we have compromised with the lending library idea, which we hope will serve as a model for other centers throughout the country."

• • •

Perhaps I wouldn't be so interested in this toy library if I hadn't seen underprivileged children—like that much better than "slum children"—at play. On the lower East side, I've seen garbage cans serving as toys. Incidentally, the toys of the Reckscher Foundation lending library are donated.

Not infrequently here among the seven million there is a happening that causes a chill despite the heat. For instance, the experience of a young man who hailed a taxicab and asked to be driven to the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street New Haven station, his intention being to go to Marmaroneck. The cab had gone only a few blocks when it stopped and two men sprang out of the shadows and held up the passenger. They took his watch and wallet and disappeared. That was bad enough. But the driver immediately demanded his fare and when it was not forthcoming, beat up the passenger!

• • •

A patrolman finally arrived and the passenger told his story. The driver denied it, saying that the trouble had been caused because the passenger had refused to pay his fare. The officer took the driver's word and lugged the young man off to a police station where he was held for two days before his brother-in-law finally found him. The matter is not yet ended, however. The brother-in-law is a member of a prominent law firm, so an investigation is in progress.

• • •

Since the taxicabs have been under the control of the police, the gyps and crooks have been greatly reduced in numbers. In fact, in the years I've been riding around New York in taxis, I've had just one untoward experience. One night, the fare was 86 cents. I handed the driver a bill and told him to keep the change. And when it was entirely too late, I discovered the bill was a ten instead of a one.

PICTORIAL NEWS OF THE WORLD

. . . all He wanted to do was sell tomatoes

but He helped make You HEALTHY 'the Year 'Round !

NOT so many years ago the round, red fruit of a certain vine was called a "love-apple." A man in his right mind would no more eat it than he would go out and munch a toadstool. It was supposed to kill you at the very first bite! Then some hardy soul decided to "bite and see!" And so the delicious tomato was introduced to a hungry world.

But news of the new tomato traveled very slowly. Your children might not be keeping healthy with it today if a grocer somewhere in an old-fashioned town hadn't been "stuck" with a bushel or two. Faced with a loss if they rotted, he threw discretion to the winds and ran an ad in the paper.

"TOMATOES FOR SALE. This fine new fruit said to be excellent for the health and complexion. I have a choice few. Fifteen cents apiece."

Mr. Grocer sold the lot, ordered more, sold those and presently was able to cut his price in half and then some while babies waxed fat on tomato juice.

CONVENIENCES GRANDMA NEVER DREAMED OF

As with tomatoes, so with vacuum cleaners, safety razors, oil burners and the latest hat from Paris. The merchants who advertise them to you have no burning desire to make this world a healthier, smarter, more leisurely place to live in. They want to sell vacuum cleaners, safety razors, oil burners and lovely hats—and advertising is the best way to do it. But their advertising has told you about a lot of things you'd hate to be without today. Their advertising has introduced you to comforts and conveniences your grandmother never even dreamed of! And—because all wise buyers read advertising—Mr. Merchant sells more advertised goods and can keep on lowering the price to you.

Reads like a romance, doesn't it? But you can prove it for yourself. As you check through the ads in the Daily Freeman today just count the number of things that make life pleasant which you might never have heard about if you hadn't "seen them in the ads." And count the number of things you'd like to buy but couldn't afford (like tomatoes at fifteen cents apiece) if advertising hadn't made them so cheap and plentiful.

Perhaps you'll agree—we could get along without advertising—along with tomatoes and fountain pens and electric fans and swell silk stockings at 69c.

But, honest—wouldn't it be a tiresome old world?

AD-SHOPPING MAKES YOUR BUYING DOLLAR GO MUCH FARTHER !

Ever play the game of ad-shopping? It's a great pastime and a grand time-and-money saver. Just make a list of what you want and need. Then check your list against the things you see advertised in the Daily Freeman. Compare prices to your heart's content. Make note of anything you see advertised that you may have overlooked in planning your shopping list. Now you're ready to go—without wasting the day tramping endlessly from one store to another. You'll come home fresh as a daisy.

Oh, but wait! Just add up the prices of the advertised items you are going to buy. Good deal less than you thought it would be, isn't it? That's what puts the biggest thrill in ad-shopping! You usually have enough money left over to buy something extra-nice and personal for yourself!

The Truth about Old Gold

BY SAM SCUDDER

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT grants a license to practically anyone who asks, to buy and sell old gold.

BUT the government says absolutely nothing about the price to be paid by buyers. That is up to each individual buyer.

RELIABLE JEWELERS know gold, test each item carefully, and weigh accurately. They do not guess. They also live up to their moral responsibility to treat the public fair and square.

If you want the HIGHEST PRICE for your old gold and silver, do not sell to house-to-house canvassers or firms located here only temporarily. Take it to ANY RELIABLE JEWELER.

We have been in business here over 75 years. In fairness to yourself GET OUR PRICE BEFORE SELLING your old gold.

Cordially yours,

Safford & Scudder

Three Injured in Automobile Mishap

Three people were injured this morning near the Ardoran Garage, operated by Chester Lyons, when their automobile left the road and crashed into a tree near the Ardoran gasoline. The driver of the car George McCann, of Dry Brook, was not injured. The three injured are Mrs. Beasie McCann of Dry Brook, who suffered a scalp wound; Henry, 12 years old, who sustained a broken and badly crushed right leg, a crushed foot and possible internal injuries and his sister, Beatrice McCann, nine years old, who has a severe laceration of the face and lip and injuries to the chest. All were brought to the Benedictine Hospital here where they were attended by Dr. John F. Larkin. The father escaped injury.

An investigation was made by Deputy Sheriffs Abram McDonald and Fred Groome. It was first reported that the car had been struck by a truck and that the driver of the truck failed to stop. Later it was reported the truck had not actually struck the car but the driver of the sedan claimed his car had been forced from the road by a truck which was proceeding up.

Deputy Sheriff Shipp arrested Benjamin Salzberg, driver of a truck owned by Sam Salzberg of 63 Hasbrouck avenue, Kingston. Salzberg was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Braithwaite and on the hearing stated his truck had not struck the Chevrolet. He demanded a jury trial and the case was set down for August 30.

The Chevrolet sedan was a total wreck.

HASBROUCK AVENUE HOUSE REPORTED BURGLARIZED

Wednesday afternoon Marion Colburn of 161 Hasbrouck avenue reported to the police department that someone had entered his home and stolen four dresses, two hats, a pocketbook, some jewelry and 27 cents. He said that he believed entrance had been obtained through the front door of the house.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Stocks were less feverish today as trading enthusiasm cooled perceptibly and prices turned somewhat irregular.

While the financial sector apparently liked the administrative assurance that no war on profits was contemplated, it was felt that other factors would have to be considered in relation to market movements. The activity in equities was about half that of the previous session. Profit taking was also in evidence. But commission houses were not discouraged, attributing the settling of the list to a "consolidation" of gains.

There was a brief and unaccountable flurry in the liquor shares, with National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley and U. S. Industrial Alcohol getting up major fractions. Borden, Howe Sound, American Smelting, Armour of Illinois Preferred and Allied Chemical moved up moderately. Union Pacific lost a point and the other rails were unchanged to a bit lower. U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Western Union du Pont, Case, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and many others were around their Wednesday's closing levels.

TWO CUBAN ARMY OFFICERS SENTENCED TO DEATH

Havana, Aug. 23 (AP)—Two high ranking Cuban army officers were sentenced to death by a court martial today for participation in a revolutionary plot against Col. Major Angel Echevarria and Captain Augustin Erice, commander of the army signal corps, were convicted of participation in the plot in an early morning trial at Camp Columbia, outside Havana.

The Man I Love

By WALDO THAYER

© 1934 McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service.

Yesterday I gathered around to hear you read your will and testament—gathered, I say, presume, as I instructed Mr. Attorney Willetts to have you. Beatrice on my left, Dick across from her, and Fred at the far end of the table. As I write I have a nice picture of you waiting eagerly for the important part of this.

Well, you shall be kept in suspense long, my dears; though perhaps what's coming won't quite fulfill your expectations. You see, I'm putting this down just as I feel it, without any "I, Nancy Gregg, being of sound mind" rigamarole. That's principally so there can't be any misunderstanding of what I have to say to you.

You three have been close to me during these last nine years—at least, so you think. In all that time, not one of you has missed spending some hours with me each day. My wants have been cared for by you jointly—using my money, of course. Each of you has possessed the same motive: desire to be the one or among the ones called to hear the reading of this document. And so it is.

To you I shall speak first, Beatrice, for you were the first to figure in this new life of mine—this bitter, bedridden mock of an existence. You it was who rushed to me in the hospital as soon as the studio notified you of my accident. And how grateful I was then for that apparent sisterly solicitude! It really wasn't until after the first year that I saw in you a duplicate of the wretched man we once called father.

For nine straight years you've been, in ever-mounting degree, a liar and a cheat. On four occasions that I'm certain of you've plotted to poison me and only held back through the most craven sort of fear. Does that make you know how thoroughly I've been aware of all you thought hidden? To you I make one bequest, Beatrice—the bed in which I have lain for this eternity shall be yours—if you keep and sleep in it yourself.

And now, Fred. All I have said already may be repeated to you; yet I feel no hatred, for you have been only weak and silly. Those you always were, too. I remember clearly your absurd, vain little mannerisms as we played that scene together the day I fell.

And ever since, day after weary day, you have come mincing in to see me with great sorrowful cow eyes and second-grade roses. Could you think me so stupid as not to realize you stayed hours after your brief visits to my room, often overnight? That your chief mission in life was consoling Beatrice for her "privations" and "sacrifices," so that you might attain a firm grip upon my estate? You foolish, transparent little charlatan! I will you the lovely plaster cast which has embraced my body so many years.

As for your part, Dick, it is too shoddily shameful to dwell on long. To you I was engaged when it happened. Staunchly you reaffirmed devotion and your desire to marry. Only the strange new sanity of vision I had somehow acquired saved me from being fool enough to accept. Of course you were eager! I had a million and a half, you nothing; and an invalid wife in those circumstances would be ideal. And, since six months after my refusal, I have been aware that you were living on sums from my account, extorted through blackmail threats from Beatrice. To you, my gallant cavalier, I tender as a last gift the love letters you wrote me when we were young. May they bring you pleasure.

And so to the ending. One person there is, there has been, in all this wilderness of melancholy and disillusion who means anything of worth, of joy, to me. He is the man whose tender, yet wholly professional, ministrations have made this sluggish hell of inch-by-inch dying bearable. Kind and wise and wonderful, he has entered into my heart, become the sole object of such full and genuine emotions as I may still know. It is my single happiness now at last to bequeath without reservation, save as heretofore enumerated, all I own to Dr. John Renny.

One final word: Perhaps you who hear this wonder why he is not present. It is because I wish to spare him the unpleasantness of coming again into this house until all of you have left it forever. Therefore he has been notified privately of this will's terms. The rest of you will now please go, that the man I love may come home, for thus I like to think of it.

* * * * * * *

For a moment after the lawyer's droning voice ceased, there was no sound. Then savagely a chair scraped back and the large gray-haired man on his right arose.

"Well, of all the wild, monomaniacal messes I ever heard," he stated with vehemence, "that certainly is the limit! Why, it would be child's play to have it set aside—though of course I shan't dream of doing any such thing. I dare say our fine friend, the so clever doctor, has been notified and is waiting in high glee to take possession?"

Attorney Willetts slowly raised his head to meet the other's eyes. His tone's tempo matched that of the moment.

"No," he said, "not exactly. I myself went this morning to tell Doctor Renny. His office door was open. He was in his chair, dead from a dose of cyanide. A framed photograph of Nancy Gregg lay face down on his desk. Under it I found a note which said simply: 'I'm coming, dearest.'"

The nerve of those delegates to the weathermen's convention to tell us we're going to have an abnormally severe winter. It would be more to the point if they'd tell us how to can some of this summer's heat for use five months from now.

Famous Parchment Made in Stream's Magic Water

According to tradition, they were making parchment at Havant, near Portsmouth, a thousand years ago. The famous Havant parchment has a world-wide market, and one of the industry's best customers is the United States. Many libraries and museums are proud of the fact that some of their most priceless manuscripts are executed on Havant parchment.

A chalky little stream which runs from Portsdown hill is the reason for the fame of Havant's parchment. It is claimed that the water contains properties that cannot be obtained in the scientist's laboratory. After being soaked in the water from this stream, the parchment is different from any other in the world. Sheep skins are used for the vellum. They are immersed in pits filled by the stream. Then they are stretched on frames and "fleshed," or scraped.

The next process is to split the skins. This is done by a machine adjusted so delicately that it could split tissue paper. The inner skin is used for the actual parchment. This is scraped again, smoothed with pumice stone, painted with whiting and soda-ash, and then rinsed in warm water. The result is white smooth parchment. —Tit-Bits Magazine.

"Fishing" for Frogs

"Fishing" for frogs has many unusual angles as a sport. They will frequently lunge with lightning-like rapidity at a trout fly dangled before them. Old-timers at "frog fishing" use a long cane pole and a short, stout line, usually not more than two feet in length. Their lure is a treble hook, draped with red flannel. Whether the red excites a certain "bull instinct" in the frog is a matter for conjecture, but the fact remains that this lure is a most effective one. Locating a big frog, the fisherman approaches cautiously. As the red flannel dangles before its nose, the frog may make one or two false tries for it, and then strikes in earnest. Often it may hook itself on the first lunge.

Bones Broke in Early Times

Broken bones and ulcerated teeth were common millions of years ago, just as they are today. This is demonstrated by fossils in the Field museum in Chicago, according to a curator in paleontology. A skeleton of a large dinosaur has a knot on one of its ribs indicating a break that healed while it was alive. It is quite common to find two or three bones of a dinosaur's tail grown together on one piece. Broken and ulcerated teeth are also found frequently.

Negroes Owned Slaves

While several thousand negroes owned slaves prior to the Civil war there were but a few hundred of these who were slave owners in the strict sense of the word. The others were free negroes who merely purchased members of their family or relatives in order to release them from slavery. Thus they became technically slave owners themselves.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Meaning of "Potlatch"

The word potlatch is derived from a Chinook word meaning gift. A potlatch is a feast at which the host gives away most of his goods to his tribesmen as an evidence of his greatness. The custom was general among Indians from Puget Sound to Southern Alaska, but led to such disturbances that it has been forbidden by the Canadian government.

Monkeys Have Language

Investigators who have studied apes and monkeys are convinced that they have a language of their own, and have worked out the meanings of the various sounds. One of them was able to identify 32 different "words" used by chimpanzees. Similar researches among cats and poultry have disclosed 15 "words" used by the former and 12 employed by hens.

Pyramid 6,000 Years Old

The oldest large building in the world has been determined to be the "Step Pyramid" in Egypt, estimated to be 6,000 years old.

First Rural Delivery Funds

The first bill authorizing rural delivery was introduced in the house of representatives on January 5, 1892, by James O'Donnell of Michigan. The bill carried an appropriation of $6,000,000, but did not pass. Thomas E. Watson of Georgia sponsored the first bill ever passed by congress appropriating money for rural free delivery. This bill passed March 3, 1893, and appropriated $10,000 for experimental rural delivery, but this sum, together with $20,000 appropriated for the same purpose on July 16, 1894, was not used. Then on June 9, 1896, an additional $10,000 was made available, and the three experimental routes were established.

The split was enough to give the Yanks a half-game gain on the Tigers in the pennant race as Earl Whitehill led the Senators to a 7 to 5 victory over Detroit.

Ferrell, whose hitting ability is second only to his pitching, not only limited the White Sox to seven hits but produced a 3 to 2 ten-inning victory with his bat. He clouted two home runs, one in the eighth to tie the score and another in the tenth to win.

Bill Dietrich of the Athletics turned in another of the day's fine flinging performances when he shut out the Browns with eight hits to win 2 to 0. Bruce Campbell made just half the Brownie hits.

The National League schedule was a complete blank for the day, paving the way for a grand opening today of a "crucial" test for the league leading Giants. The New Yorkers open a three-game series today against the third-place Cardinals and the Dean brothers, who have beaten them eight times running, then go on for four games against Chicago's second place Cubs.

Amateur Golf Is All Match Play This Year

By BOB CAVAGNARO
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Some of the survivors of Tuesday's nation-wide sectional qualifying tests for the national amateur golf championship may hold some fears about the all-match play title tournament, but not so with George Terry Dunlap, Jr., the reigning king.

When the United States Golf Association announced the change from a championship qualifying round to all two-man warfare—patterned along the lines of the British amateur—Dunlap raised an eyebrow and heaved a sigh of relief.

"That was a grand shift," George said today. "It's a break for me because I have a horror of qualifying rounds. I prefer match play."

Dunlap barely got into the qualifying fold at Cincinnati last year when he ascended the amateur throne. He was locked in a tie with a dozen other title-seekers for the last eight places in the champion ship group of 32.

Dunlap doesn't think the shift enhances his chance of repeating. He rates himself a 100 to 1 shot and explains by pointing to the flock of threatening stars such as W. Lawson Little, Jr., the British amateur title-holder, Johnny Fischer, Johnny Goodman, Jack Westland and Francis Ouimet.

Miss Van Wie Speaks About National Golf

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—Although the battle for the women's national golf championship is still more than a month away, the field can start worrying over its big job of toppling Virginia Van Wie from her throne.

Since she captured the national title for the second successive time last year, the Chicago girl has won two sectional championships. In February, she crushed Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, 5 and 4, and in the South Atlantic, yesterday, she defeated Mrs. Hill, her closest rival, by 10 shots in the 72-hole western derby.

Miss Van Wie, who believes too much tournament golf makes a player's game stale, has adopted a "loafing" policy from a competitive standpoint since her triumph over Helen Hicks in the national finals at Exmoor. Yet, she is displaying almost perfect golf.

Miss Van Wie figures the 1934 championship will be one of the hardest of all to win with 64 in the field and two match play rounds instead of one on the first day.

"How about Glenna Collett Vare?" she was asked.

"Don't know about Glenna. Maybe, she's just entering again for sports sake. But if she wants to win that title bad enough, she can do it. None of us can quite match Glenna, you know."

THE Sportlight BY GRANTLAND RICE

The Call of the Sea.

("What's the idea," asks a reader, "of these coming yacht races? Is it because I'm a land-lubber? What is this call of the sea, anyway?")

You've never felt the salty spray, you've never known the surf,
Whose feet have only trod the plains or felt the narrow turf,
Who've only seen the hills and vales, the growing wheat and corn,
Nor faced the gales across the Gulf—the trip around the Horn?

I've heard the wind sing through the pines—I know the river tunes—
Give me the roaring of the gales that breaks across the dunes—
Well, yes, I'd rather be on shore when gales are riding by
But I can guess how sailors feel when storms ride down the sky.

This earth is three-fourths water—with its paltry bit of land—
There must be those, unchained and free—who feel and understand,
Beyond the crowded, sweating streets that lead to some lost goal,
Not knowing what the open space can carry to the soul.

We crawled from water, through the ooze, still searching for a mind;
We found our feet amid the muck—and left our fins behind;
But somewhere in our heritage, through surf and white-lashed foam,
Still searching for the dream called Mind—the water calls us home.

The sea is deep within our blood—still-calm or simoon foamed—
It calls from ages, long forgot, when dinosaurs roamed;
When "scaled and tailed" we sought the road that beckoned for away
To sweating crowds—or Farm Relief—or smoke-filled cabaret.

Land-lubbers, hold your narrow patch—your dream—forsaken girth,
The Seven Seas are calling still around the realm of earth;
The sails are set—the wind is up—the salt leaps from the foam,
And deep within your land-bound hearts the waves are calling Home.

Advance Headaches.

England, California and Texas may take a trimming at yachting or polo later on—and again they may not.

But at least they have one long, leaping start over the East—and this concerns the matter of advance headaches, now dominating the eastern plains and dunes.

England's yacht is already picked—since England has only one yacht on this side of the water—Sopwith's Endeavour.

The American committee has to pick the defending yacht and more than one Boston sailer has already suggested dirty work at the cross roads if the Yankee isn't named.

In any event stormy days are ahead before the test survivor is named to meet England's challenger.

In the meanwhile Devereux Milburn and his committee face even bigger and better headaches in naming the Eastern polo team to meet the West.

The Western problem is hardly any problem at all—Cecil Smith, Roark, Rube Williams, Elmer Boeseke and Eric Pedley—with the only debate between Williams and Roark.

It is far different in the East where Tommy Hitchcock's playing condition is still a guess—and where the selecting committee have about eight young men who are just about on a line.

The Eastern Tangle.

Messrs. Milburn, Skiddy von Stade and Cooley, the Eastern selection committee, are normally happy, cheerful and optimistic souls. But just at this spot "the dawn breaks with gathering shadows" and "night falls, heavy as remembered sin."

The Western polo team will run to 36 goals, headed by Smith and Boeseke at ten goals each—a powerful array.

Outside of Tommy Hitchcock the Eastern team must be picked from seven entries at seven goals and one at eight—a total of 29.

Hitchcock would lift that count to 32—if he is right and ready. That isn't the main kink. In their eagerness and keenness to make the Eastern team most of the candidates persist in showing enough varied form to keep the committee completely baffled.

On one day some of them will play like a ten goal star and a few days later like a 4 goal substitute.

As Devereux Milburn says—"It is much like attempting to pick a 4-man team from 8 golfers, all with the same handicaps, who jump from 72 to 82, and vice-versa."

Who is there to say on which day this type of golfer will shoot a 72 or an 82? Yet the Eastern committee must make this guess.

It is a long, far and wailing cry to the old days when Milburn, Whitney, and the Waterburys simply said—"Come and take up!"

Meadowbrook was in the saddle then. Today the West is in the saddle as the East found a year ago in Chicago—in the saddle riding "hell for leather."

But no bunch of polo players has ever worked harder than this Eastern outfit. No small part of this is due to the knowledge that every position on the team had at least two well matched candidates. This will mean a well conditioned round-up and a well conditioned set of ponies, who have also been on the job.

A year ago the East felt fairly sure of winning. Now the East understands that only the finest polo it has to offer will carry anything like an even show.

These will be helpful factors but it is no easy job to send a 29 or even a 32 goal team over the prostrate forms of a 36 or a 37 goal team. It isn't any sure thing, however, and there will be all the action you want—no matter what four the East may nominate for the job.

Cup Boats Get Final Trials Off Newport

By TOM HORGAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newport, R. I., Aug. 23 (AP).—The Yankee of Boston, last user of the current America's cup defensive fleet, and Rainbow, Harold S. Vanderbilt's candidate, for the first time today in the final official trials for defense nomination.

Rainbow defeated Frederick Prince's Weetamoe yesterday in the first race of the series, and Yankee had a day of inactivity in which to prepare for the final test. Today Weetamoe can remain at her mooring and tomorrow Rainbow will have a respite.

The trials are being enlivened by the presence of the British challenger, Tom Sopwith's Endeavour. Yesterday he took her over a good portion of the course and the invader behaved so well that she has won the wholesome respect of all observers. On the windward leg of the thirty mile windward-leeward course, Endeavour gave evidence of being able to hold Rainbow and Weetamoe on even or even better terms.

Pro Tennis Stars In Quarter-Finals

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—The two foreign stars, Hans Nusselein of Germany, and Karel Kozeluh of Czechoslovakia, menaced a pair of seeded Americans, Emmett Pare of Memphis, Tenn., and Bruce Barnes of Austin, Tex., today in the opening quarter-final tests of the national professional tennis title tournament.

Nusslein opposed Pare, in the first match, with Barnes and Kozeluh following. In the doubles, Barnes and Paul Heston of Washington, are matched with the Chicago pair, George O'Connell and George Jennings, and Vincent Richards and Charles Wood of Bernardsville, N. J., meet Ernest Kuhn of New York, and Ed Faulkner of Philadelphia.

Lord Jim Will Race At N. Y. State Fair

Syracuse, N. Y., August 23 (Special).—Lord Jim, a gelding in more than name alone, with the richest prize of all harness horsedom earned by his well-deserved victory in the Hambletonian Stake at Goshen, will soon parade his mysteriously winning ways before throngs packing the State Fairgrounds on Labor Day for the greatest race card sported here in many years.

Regarded as only a rank outsider by the average fan prior to the Hambletonian, horsemen who had seen the colt work last season and this year harbored a hunch that he might do something startling at Goshen under the skillful tutelage of H. M. "Doc" Parshall. They were right, as history proves, but this fancy-stepping son of Guy Axworthy, out of Selka, still remains a "mystery horse" to the rank and file of racegoers.

Lord Jim's victory in the Hambletonian was all the more remarkable because he had not previously won a start all year. And while he has some fair competitors against the Racing Grand, it was purely the racing rivals. In 1933 [illegible] came through at the last moment to Lexington to win the [illegible] stake against Bertha C., Hanover Hopkins, Ella Bowers and a few other promising [illegible] in the race.

With 1934 dawning everybody in the harness sport wondered what Lord Jim would do. He appeared was fast, if he'd only stay sound. All season he performed, but not to well. Then came the Hambletonian. But that's old stuff now. The big question among fans and horsemen now is what will Lord Jim do in the Western Horseman $[illegible] three-year-old trot, known to thousands as the Horseman Futurity, when he starts against his most bitter rivals in what is certain to be a fast and furious race September 3, Labor Day.

Rose, Strong And Hancock Reach Semi-finals In City Net Tourney

Yesterday afternoon at Forsyth [illegible] there started to rain hard. Rose he strode and Stan Hancock had finished their matches in the city tennis championship tourney and are now resting in the semi-final brackets. Jansen Fowler and Don Joy were unable to start on account of the storm but will play today to decide the fourth member of the select circle.

Rose had his hands full in his set with Hal Merrill. Although the score 6-3, 6-4 might give the impression that the match was lopsided it decidedly was to the contrary. In the first set Merrill had Rose running all over the court. Most all the games went to deuce, but Randall's greater tournament experience served him in good stead and in the pinches he was able to put home the winning shots. In the second set Rose, having an idea of what he was up against, called on all his court genius and skill and took the set at 6-4. As a result of his win, Randall is now in the semi finals and his next opponent will be Ed Strong.

Strong earned the right to meet Rose by defeating Bob Hancock, 7-5, 6-3. When they walked off the court Ed knew he had been through a tennis match. Bob put up a stiff battle. The first set was nip and tuck all the way, both boys were playing for the [illegible] and slamming the ball at every stroke. Strong was [illegible] and the game went to deuce. Hancock evened a fleeting moment [illegible] the advantage. But Bob [illegible] up and with a fine placement [illegible] brought the game back to [illegible]. Strong then served two aces in succession for the game and with a [illegible] sweep of backhand drives [illegible] through Hancock's service [illegible] the set at 7-5. The win seemed to add stimulus to Ed's already impressive game, and he played at top speed in the second set to take it at 6-3.

In the lower half of the draw the game between Fowler and Joy was postponed until today on account of the rain. The winner of this match will come to grips with Stan Hancock, who defeated Don Turner, 6-1, 6-3.

Don caught Stan at the top of his game and was unable to cope with his smashing drives. Hancock won any number of points with superb placements and time and again caught Don out of position. At the rate he is going, Stan will make it pretty tough for anybody else who might have designs on the championship cup.

Rush of Orders for Reserves Points To Crowd for Legion Mat Bill Friday

Response to the advertisement in The Freeman quoting the slashed prices on the American Legion wrestling show scheduled for Friday night, August 24, at the open air stadium, corner of Broadway and West O'Reilly street, was most gratifying reports Les Barth, custodian of Kingston Post's club, who has charge of taking orders for reserved seats.

"Orders have been coming in fine," Les said this morning. "Friday's show should be attended by a record crowd, if reservations continue to pour in like they have since last night. I think there'll be a bigger turnout to the wrestling matches than at the last boxing show." The Legion did not have seats enough to accommodate the crowd that patronized the program of fisticuffs it sponsored on August 3. Arrangements have been made to place more seats inside the big canvas walls for the grappling bill.

In case or rain the bouts will be held in the Municipal Auditorium, so as not to disappoint those anxious to see them.

Matchmaker Joe Kelly and Paul S. Gregorian, who is working in conjunction with him, have signed some of the best known wrestlers to compete; grapplers who are noted for their talents as athletes rather than as showmen.

The card:

Main event — Sam Cordovano, Columbia line coach in football, vs. Sid Nabors, former amateur champion of the south. Semi-final—Eli Fischer, Rutgers University grid star vs. Gene LeDoux, French Canadian. Prelims.—Charlie Allen of Albany vs. Henry Piers; Murray Brazin and Bert Ruhl.

Starting time of the bouts is 8:30 o'clock.
